

cold of the

210

Accessions Shelf No. 149, 591 G,3967.39

Barton Library.

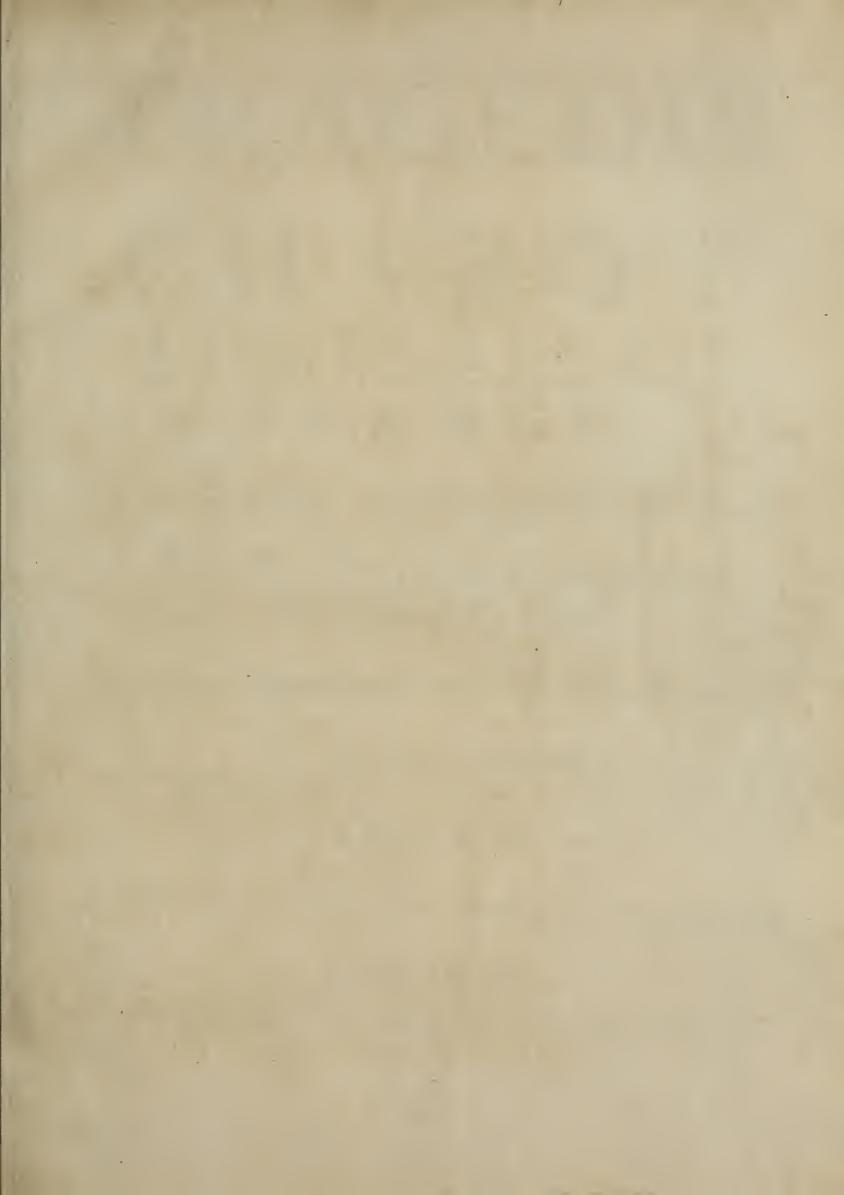

Thomas Ponnant Buiton.

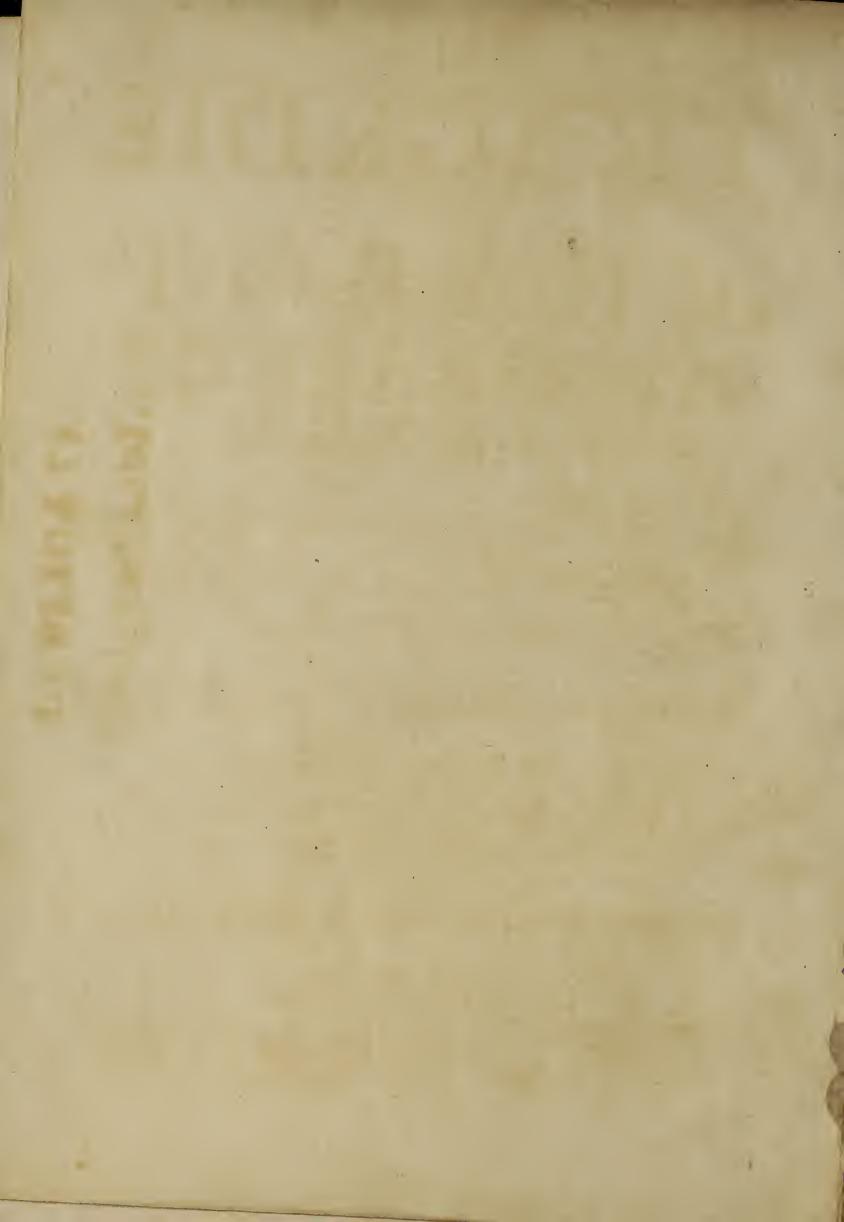

Koston Public Cibrary.

Received, May, 1873.

THETRAGEDIE

CHABOT ADMIRALLOF FRANCE:

As it vvas presented by her Majesties Servants, at the private House in Drury Lane.

Written by Seorge Chapman, and and fines Shirly.

LONDON,
Printed by Tho. Cotes, for Andrew Crooke, and William Cooke.

1639.

Speakers.

A Sall.
Allegre.
King.

Queene.

Treasuror.

Chancellor.

Admirall.

Father.

Generall.

Chabot.

Iudges.

Officers.

Secretary.

Ushers.

Constable.

Courtiers.

Porter.

Guard.

DUPLICATE Bridgew'Liby, 149,591 May,1873

THETRAGEDIE

OF

PHILIP CHABOT,

ADMIRALL OF FRANCE.

Actus Primus.

Enter Asall, and Allegre.

'Asall.

The

Ow Phillip Chabot, Admirall of France,
The great, and onely famous Favorite
To Francis first of that Imperial name,
Hath found a fresh competitor in glory,
(Duke Montmorancie, Constable of France)

Who drinkes as deepe as he of the streame Royall, And may in little time convert the strength To raise his spring, and blow the others fall.

Al. The world would wish it so, that will not patiently

Endure the due rise of a vertuous man.

As. If he be vertuous, what is the reason That men affect him not, why is he lost

A 2

Toth

Toth! generall opinion, and become...
Rather their hate than love?

Al. I wonder you Will question it, aske a ground or reason-Of men bred in this vile degenerate age; The most men are not good, and it agrees not With impious natures to allow whats honest, Tis an offence enough to be exalted To regall favours, great men are not lafe In their owne vice, where good men by the hand Of Kings are planted to survey their workings; What man was ever fixt 'ith Sphere of honour, And precious to his Soveraigne, whose actions, Nay very soule was not expos'd to every Common and base diffection? and not onely That which in Nature hath excuse, and in Themselves is priviledged by name of frailtie, But even Vertues are made crimes, and doom'd Toth' fate of Treason.

Aske your pardon Sir, but thinkes your judgement, His love to Justice, and Corruptions hate

Are true and hearty?

One argument, his hearty truth to all,
For in the heart hath anger his wifest seate,
And gainst unjust suites such brave anger fires him.
That when they seeke to passe his place and power,
Though mov'd, and urg'd by the other minion,
Or by his greatest friends, and even the King
Leade them to his allowance with his hand,
First given in Bill, assign'd, even then his spirit,
(In nature calme as any Summers evening)
Puts up his Whole powers like a Winters sea,
His bloud boyles over, and his heart even cracks
At the injustice, and he teares the Bill,
And would doe, were he for't to be torne in peeces.

As Tis brave I sweare.

Al. Nay it is worthy your wonder That I must tell you surther, theres no Needle: In a Sunne Diall plac'd upon his steele In such a tender posture, that doth tremble The timely Diall being held smisse, And will shake ever, till you hold it right. More tender than himsefe in any thing That he concludes in Iustice for the State: For as a fever held him, hee will shake When he is signing any things of weight, Least humane frailty should misguide his justice.

As. You have declar'd him a most noble lusticer.

Al. He truely weights and feeles Sir, what a charge? The subjects livings are (being even their lives Laid on the hand of power,) which abus'd Though seene, blood flownot from the justice seate; Tis in true sence as grievous, and horrid.

As. It argues nothing lesse, but since your Lord

Is diverfly reported for his parts,

Whats your true consure of his generall worth,

Vertue and Indgement.

Al. As of a Picture wrought to opticke reason, That to all passers by, seemes as they move Now woman, now a Monster, now a Divel!, And till you stand, and in a right-line view it, You cannot well judge what the maine forme is, So men that view him but in vulgar passes Casting but laterall, or partiall glances, At what he is, suppose him weake, unjust, Bloody, and monstrous, but stand free and fast, And judge him by no more than what you know Ingenuously, and by the right laid line Of truth, he truely, will all stiles deserve ... Of wife, just, good, a man both soule and nerve.

As. Sir, I must joyne in just beleefe with you, But whats his rivall the Lord high Constable?

Al. As just, and well inclin'd when hee's himselse, (Not wrought on with the counfells, and opinions

B 3

OF

The Administ of France.

Of other men) and the maine difference is,
The Admirall is not flexible nor wonne
To move one scruple, when he comprehends
The honest tract and justnesse of a cause,
The Constable explores not so sincerely
The course hee runnes, but takes the minde of others
(By name Iudiciall) for what his owne
Iudgement, and knowledge should conclude.

As. A fault

In my apprehension, anothers knowledge
Applied to my instruction, cannot equals
My owne soules knowledge, how to informe Acts;
The Sunnes richtradiance shot through waves most faire,
Is but a shaddow to his beames ith ayre;
His beames that in the ayre we so admire,
Is but a darkenesse to his slame in site,
In sire his fervour but as vapour slies
To what his owne pure bosome rarisses:
And the Almighty wisedom, having given
Each man within himselse an apter light
To guide his acts, than any light withouthim
(Creating nothing not in all things equals)
It seemes a fault in any that depend
On others knowledge, and exile their owne.

Al. Tis nobly argued, and exemplified, But now I heare my Lord, and his young rivall Are to be reconcil'd, and then one light

May serve to guide them both.

A/. I wish it may, the King being made first mover To forme their reconcilement, and enflame it With all the sweetnesse of his praise and honour.

Al. See, tis dispatch'd I hope, the King doth grace it. Loud Musicke, and Enter Vshers before, the Secretary, Tresuror, Chancellor, Admirall, Constable hand in hand, the King following, others attend.

Kin. This doth expresse the noblest fruit of peace.

Cha. Which when the great begin, the humble end
In joyfull imitation, all combining

A gardian beyond the 7 brigian knot

Palt wit to lose it, or the sword, be still so.

Tre. Tis certaine Sir. by concord least things grow Most great, and flourishing like trees that wrap. Their forehead in the skies, may these doe so.

Kin. You heare my Lord, all that is spoke contends

To celebrate with pious vote the attonement So lately, and so nobly made betweene you.

Ad. Which for it selfe Sir, resolve to keepe

Pure, and inviolable, needing none

To encourage or confirme it, but my owne Love and allegiance to your facred counsell.

Kin. Tis good, and pleases, like my dearest health,

Stand you firme on that sweete simplicitie.

Con. Past all earth pollicie that would infringe it.

Kin. Tis well, and answers all the doubts suspected.

Enter one that whispers with the Admiral.

And what moves this close message Phillip?

Adm. My wives Father Sir, is closely come to Court.

King. Is he come to the Court, whose aversation
So much affects him, that he shunnes and slies it,
What's the strange reason that he will not rise

Above the middle region he was borne in?

Adm. He saith Sir, tis because the extreame of height Makes a man lesse seeme to the impersect eye. Then he is truely, his acts envied more, And though he nothing cares for seeming, so His being just stand firme twixt heaven and him, Yet since in his soules jealousie, hee feares. That he himselfe advanced, would undervalue Men placed beneath him, and their businesse with him, Since height of place oft dazles height of judgement, He takes his toppe-saile downe in such rough stormes, And apts his sailes to ayres more temperate.

Raise men that are not wise till they be high?

You haue our leave, but tell him Phillip wee

Would have him neerer.

Con. Your desirés attend you.

Enter another?

Kin. We know from whence you come, say to the Queene; We were comming to her, tis a day of love

And the seales all perfection.

Exit

Tre. My Lord,

We must beseech your stay.

Con. My stay? Cha. Our Counsells

Have led you thus farre to your reconcilement, And must remember you, to observe the end At which in plaine I told you then wee aim'd at, You know we allurg'd the attonement, rather To enforce the broader difference bet weene you, Then to conclude your friendshippe, which wise men Know to be fashionable, and priviledg'd pollicie, And will succeede betwixt you, and the Admirall As sure as fate, if you please to get sign'd A fute now to the King with all our hands, Which will so much increase his precise justice, That weighing not circumstances of politicke State, He will instantly oppose it, and complaine, And urge in passion, what the King will sooner Punish than yeeld too, and so render you In the Kings frowne on him, the onely darling; And mediate power of France.

Con. My good Lord Chancellor, Shall I so late atton'd, and by the Kings Hearty and earnest motion, fall in peeces?

Cha. Tis he, not you that breake.

Tre. Ha not you patience

To let him burne himselse in the Kings slame?

Cha. Come, be not Sir insected with a spice

Of that too servile equitie, that renders

Men sree borne slaves, and rid with bits like horses,

When you must know my Lord, that even in nature

A man is Animal politicum,

So that when he informes his actions simply

He does in both 'gainst pollicie and nature, And therefore our soule motion is affirm'd To be like heavenly natures circular, And circles being call'd ambitious lines, We must like them become ambitious ever, And endles in our circumventions; No tough hides limiting our cheverill mindes. Tre. Tis learnedly, and past all answer argued, Yare great, and must grow greater still, and greater, And not be like a dull and standing lake, That settles, putrisies, and chokes with mudde, But like a river gushing from the head, That windes through the undervailes, what checkes ore flow-Gets strength still of his course, Till with the Ocean meeting, even with him In sway, and title, his brave billowes move. Con. You speake a rare affection, and high soules, But give me leave great Lords, still my just thankes Remembred to your counsells and direction, I seeking this way to confirme my selfe I undermine the columnes that support My hopefull glorious fortune, and at once Provoke the tempest, though did drowne my envie, With what assurance shall the King expect My faith to him, that breake it for another, He has engag'd our peace, and my revenge Forfits my trust with him, whose narrow fight Will penetrate through all our mists, could we Vaile our designe with clouds blacker than night; But grant this danger over, with what Iustice, Or satisfaction to the inward Judge, Shall I be gultie of this good mans ruine, Though I may still the murmuring tongues without me, Loud conscience has a voyce to shadder greatnesse. Secr. A name to fright, and terrifie young statists, There is necessitie my Lord, that you Must lose your light, if you ecclipse not him, Two starres so Lucide cannot shine at once

In such a firmament, and better you. Extinguish his fires, then be made his fuell,

And in your ashes give his slame a Trophy.

Cha. My Lord, the league that you have vow'd of friend-In a true understanding not confines you, (thip,

But makes you boundlesse, turne not edge at such.

A liberty, but looke to your owne fortune;

Secure your honour, a Precisian, In state, is a rideculous miracle

Friendship is but a visor, beneath which A wise man laughes to see whole families.

Ruinde, upon whose miserable pile:

He mounts to glory, Sir you must résolve:

Touse any advantage.

Con. Misery.

Of riling Statelmen I must on, I fee

That 'gainst the politicke, and priviledg'd fashion.

All justice tasts but affectation.

Cha. Why so: we shall do good on him ith' end. Exeunt? Enter Father and the Admirall.

Adm. You are most welcome.

Fa. I wish your Lordships safetie,

Which whilft I pray for, I must not forger To urge agen the wayes to fixe you where

No danger has accesse to threaten you.

Adm. Still your old argument, I owe your love fort?

Fa. But fortified with new and pregnant reasons,

That you should leave the Court.

Ad. I dare not Sir.

Fa. You dare be undone then.

Ad. I should be ingratefull

To such a master, as no subject boasted To leave his service when they exact. My chiefest dutie, and attendance Sir.

Fa. Would thou wert lesse degraded from thy titles,

And swelling offices, that will ith' end Engulfe thee past a rescue, I had not come So farre to trouble you at this time, but that I doe not like the loud tongues o'the world

That

That say the King has tane another favorite, The Constable a gay man, and a great, With a hugh rraine of faction too, the Queene, Chancellor, Treasurer, Secretary, and An army of state warriers, whose discipline Is sure, and subtile to confusion, I hope the rumour's false, thou art so calme? Adm. Report has not abus'd you Sir.

Fa. It has not,

. The device of the series of And you are pleas'd, then you doe meane to mixe With unjust courses, the great Constable And you combining, that no suite may passe One of the graples of your eithers rape, I that abhorr'd, must I now entertaine A thought, that your so straight, and simple custome To render Iustice, and the common good, Should now be patch'd with pollicy, and wrested From the ingenious step you tooke, And hang of the long of the rest of the result world a paint

Vpon the shoulders of your enemy, it said to the

To beare you out in what you shame to act!

Adm. Sir, We both are reconciled.

Fa. It followes then that both the acts must beare Like reconcilement, and if hee will now and so that he had Maligne and mallice you for crossing him Or any of his faction in their wites, a little and little and Being now atton'd, you must be one in all, One in corruption, and twixt you two millstones New pickt, and put together, must the graine Of good mens needfull meanes to live, be ground Into your choking superfluities; You both too rich, they ruinde.

Adm. I conceive Sir

Wee both may be enrich'd, and raise our fortunes Even with our places in our Soveraignes favour: Though past the height of others, yet within The rules of Law and Iustice, and approoved which I wood Our actions white and innocent

Fa. I doubt it While inforc'd shew perhaps, which will I feare Prove in true substance but a Millers whitenesse, More sticking in your clothes then conscience. Adm. Your censure herein tasts some passion Sir, And I beseech you nourish better thoughts, Then to imagine that the Kings meere grace Sultaines such prejudice by those it honours: That of necessitie we must pervert it
With passionate enemies, and ambitious boundlesse

Avarice, and every licence incident Avarice, and every licence incident To fortunate greatnesse, and that all abuse it For the most impious avarice of some. Fa. As if the totall summe of savorites si ailties in a unit I Affectednow the full rule of their Kings 200 (1811 18 2001) A In their owne partially disposed ambitions, And that Kings doe no hazard infinitely In their free realties of rights and honours, Where they leave much for favourites powers to order. Adm. But wee have such a master of our King sile nog In the Imperiall art, that no power slies Out of his favour, but his policie ties A criance to it, to containe it still; And for the reconcilement of us Sir, but an another consideration Never were two infavgur, that were more One in all love of Iustice, and true honour, Though in the act and protecution Pehaps we differ. How soever yet One beame us both creating, what should let That both oun foules should both one metrle beare, and that one stampe, one word tone than the And that one stampe, one word, one character. Fa. I could almost be won to be a Courtier, Theres some thing more in's composition,
Then ever yet was favourites. a rus i Entersa Courtier, it poly mo di n no 12 Whats hee? , nicition by granto is night of the diguest Cour. I bring your Lordship a sign'd bill, to have the The addition of your honor'd hand, the counsell Have

Have all before subscribed, and full prepar'd it. Ad. It seemes then they have weigh'd the importance of it, Cour. No doubt my Lord, and the first of the contract of the c And know the grant is just. Or else they take therein the Constables word, It being his suite, and his power having wrought The King already to appose his hand. Adm. I doe not like his working of the King, in the For if it be a suite made knowne to him, 1039 (1) and 1 And fit to passe, he wrought himselfe to it, However my hand goes to no such grants and the comments of But first I'le know and censure it my selfe. Cour. A he, if thou beeft goddesse of contentions to the That love tooke by the haire, and hurl'd from heaven and I A sume in earth thy empire, and this bill should no on proce. Thy firebrand make to turne his love, thus tempted and that Into a hate, as horrid as thy furies. Adm. Does this beare title of his Lordships fuite? Cour. It does my Lord, and therefore he beseech'd The rather your dispatch. In his first single in It Adm. No thought the rather, But now the rather all powers against it, The suite being most injust, and he pretending In all his actions, justice, on the sudden and a substitute with the After his so late vow not to violate it, Is strange and vile, and if the King himselfe Should owne and urge it, I would stay and crosse it, For tis within the free power of my office, And I should straine his kingdome if I past it. I see their poore attempts, and giddy malice; Is this the reconcilement that so lately He vow'd in sacred witnesse of the King? Assuring me, he never more would offer To passe a suite unjust, which I well know This is, above all, and have often beene urg'd To give it passage, be you Sir the Judge. Fa. I wonot meddle With any thing of state, you knew long since. B 3 Admi

You

Adm. Yet you may heare it Sir. Fa. You wonot urge

My opinion then, go to.

Adm. An honest merchant Presuming on our league of France with Spaine, Brought into Spaine a wealthy ship, to vent

Her fit commodities to serve the country, Which, in the place of suffering their saile

Were seas'd to recompence a Spanish hip Priz'd by a French man, ere the league was made,

No suites, no letters of our Kings could gaine

Our merchants first right in it, but his letters Vnreverently received, the Kings selfe scandall,

Beside the leagues breach, and the foule injustice Done to our honest merchant, who endured all,

Till some small time since (authoris'd by our counsell,

Though not in open Court) he made a ship out, And tooke a Spaniard, brings all home, and sues

To gaine his full prov'd losse, full recompence ob I

Of his just prize, his prize is staid and ceaz'd, mon a first all Yet for the Kings disposure, and the Spaniard

Makes suite to be restor'd her, which this bill

Would frine get granted, faining (as they hop'd)
With my allowance, and way given to make and it all the land.

Fa. Twere absolute injustice;

Adm. Should I passe it.

Fa. Passe life, and state before.

Adm. If this would seeme

His Lordships suite, his love to me, and justice Including plots upon me, while my simplenesse

Is seriously vow'd to reconcilement:

Love him good vulgars, and abhorre me still, For if I court your flatterie with my crimes,

Heavens love before me fly, till in my tombe Isticke pursuing it, and for this bill, or and saffing

Thus say twas shiver'd, blesseus equall heaven!

Fa. This could I cherish, now above his losse,

. Sizinto a great de la constante de la consta

You may report as much, the bill discharg'd Sir.

Actus Secundus.

Enter King and Queen, Secretary with the Torne bill.

Kin. 7 Sitene so.

Doe Kings of France reward foule Traitors thus?

Kin. No Traitor, y'are too loude, Chabots no Traitor,

He has the passions of a man about him, And multiplicitie of cares may make

Wise men forget themselves, come be you patient.

Qu. Can you be so, and see your selfe thus tornes

Kin. Our selfe.

Qu. There is some lest, if you dare owne, Your royall character, is not this your name?

Kin. Tis Francia I confesse.

Qu. Be but a name

If this staine live upon't, affronted, by Your subject, shall the sacred name of King,

A word to make your nation bow and tremble,

Be thus profain'd, are lawes establish'd

To punish the defacers of your image,

But dully set by the rude hand of others

Vpon your coine, and shall the character

That doth include the bleffing of all France,

Your name, thus written by your royall hand

Design'd for Justice, and your Kingdomes honour,

Not call up equall anger to reward it ?

Your Counsellors of state contemn'd, and slighted

As in this braine more circumscrib'd all wisedome,

And pollicy of Enpire, and your power,

Subordinate and subject to his passion.

Kin. Come, it concernes you not.

Qu. Is this the consequence

Ofan attonement made so lately betweene

The French Admirali.

The hopefull Mountmorencie, and his Lordship Vrge by your selfe with such a precious sanction; Come, he that dares doe this, wants not a heart, But opportunitie. 2.5 5.33

Kin. To doe what?

Qu. To teare your crowne off.

Kin. Come your language doth taste more Of rage and womanish flame than solid reason Against the Admirall; what commands of yours

Not to your expectation obey'd in war and a subject to

By him, is ground of your so keene displeasure?

Qu. Commands of mine? he is too great, and powerfull

To stoope to my employment, a Colossus,

And can stride from one Province to another as grounds.

By the assistance of those offices with the start of the

You have most confidently impos'd upon him,

Tis he, not you take up the peoples eyes

And admiration, while his Princely wife.

Kin. Nay then I reach the spring of your distaite,

He has a wife,

Enter Chancellor, Treasurer, and whisper with the King.

Qu. Whom for heit pride I love not, in the line of the

And I but in her husbands ruine in the later to the later

Can triumph ore her greatnesse single and all

King. Well, well, Berhinkeron transaction of thin Exit,

Cha. He beginnes toline, al circula quality in

Madam you are the soule of our great worke.

Qu. Ile follow, and imploy my powers upon him.

Tre. We are confident you will prevaile at last,

And for the pious worke oblige the King to you.

Cha, And us your humblest creatures.

Que. Presse no surther. Exit. Que.

Cha. Lets seeke out my Lord Constable.

Tre. And inflame him. A warmen and the

Cha. To expostulate with Chabot, something may

Arise from thence, to pull more weight upon him. Exeunt. Enter Father and Allegre.

Fa. How forts the businesse? how tooke the King

The tearing of his bill?

Al. Exceeding well,
And seem'd to smile at all their grimme complaints,
Gainst all that outrage to his highnesse hand,
And said in plaine, he sign'd it but to try
My Lords firme suffice

Fa. What a sweete King tis?

Al. But how his rivall the Lord Constable
Is labour'd by the Chancellor, and others to retore
His wrong with ten parts more upon my Lord,
Is monstrous?

Fa. Neede hee their spurres?

At. I Sir, for hees afraid

Vpon the King (being newly entred Mynion)
Since tis but patience sometime they thinke;
Because the favor spending in two streames,
One must runne low at length, till when he dare
Take fire in such slame, as his faction wishes,
But with wise seare containes himselfe, and so
Like a greene faggot in his kindling smoakes,
And where the Chancellor his chiefe Cyclops sindes
The fire within him apt to take, he blowes,
And then the faggot slames, as never more
The bellowes needed, till the too soft greenenesse
Of his state habit, shewes his sappe still slowes,
Above the solid timber, with which, then
His blaze shrinkes head, he cooles, and smoakes agen.

Fa. Good man he would be, wod the bad not spoile him.

Al. True sir, but they still ply him with their arts,
And as I heard have wrought him, personally
To question my Lord with all the bitternesse
The galls of all their faction can powre in,
And such an expectation hangs upon't,
Though all the Court as twere with child, and long'd
To make a mirror of my Lords cleare blood,
And therein see the full ebbe of his flood,
And therefore if you please to counsell him

C

You shall performe a fathers part.

Fa. Nay fince

Hees gone so farre, I wod not have him seare. But dare ê'm, and yet ile not meddle int.

Enter Admirall:

Hees here, if he have wit to like his cause, His spirit wonot be asham'd to die int.

Exit.

Al. My Lord retire, y'are way-laid in your walkes, Your friendes are all fallen from you, all your servants Suborn'd by all advantage to report Each word you whisper out, and to serve you

With hat and knee, while other have their hearts:

Adm, Much profit may my foes make of such servants,

I love no enemy I have so well,

To take to ill a bargaine from his hands.

Al. Their other oddes yet shun, all being combinde, And lodg'd in ambuth ariv'd to doe you mischiese

By any meanes past feare of law, or soveraigne.

Adm. I walke no delart, yet goe arm'd with that, That would give wildest beasts instincts to rescue, Rather then offer any force to hurt me; My innocence is, which is a conquering justice, As weares a shield, that both defends and fights.

All. One against all the world.

Adm. The more the oddes,

The lesse the conquest, or if all the world Be thought an army sit to employ gainst one. That one is argued sit to sight gainst all; If I fall under them, this breast shall beare. Their heape digested in my sepulchre, Death is the life of good men, let e'm come.

Enter Constable, Chancellor, Treasurer, Secretary.

You have exprest what sea of gall flow'd in you,

In tearing of the bill I sout to allow

In tearing of the bill I sent to allow.

Adm. Dare you confesse the sending of that bill.

Con. Dare, why not?

Adm. Because it breake your oath

Made in our reconcilement, and betrayes
The honour, and the chiefe life of the King
Which is his justice.

Con. Betraies?

Adm. No lesse, and that Ile prove to him.

Omnes You cannot.

I rea. I would not wish you offer at an action So most impossibly, and much against The judgement, and favour of the King.

Adm. His judgement nor his favour I respect,

So I preserve his Iustice.

Cha. Tis not Iustice,

Which I'le prove by law, and absolute learning.

Adm. All your great law, and learning are but words, When I plead plainely, naked truth, and deedes, Which though you seeke to fray with state, and glory,

I'le shoote a shaft at all your globe of light,

If lightning split it, yet twas high and right.

Con. Brave resolution so his acts be just,

He cares for gaine not honour. Chan. How came he then

By all his infinite honour and his gaine?

Tre. Well said my Lord.

Sec. Answer but onely that.

Con. By doing justice still in all his actions.

Sec. But if this action prove unjust, will you

Say all his other may be so as well,

And thinke your owne course fitter farre than his.

Con, I will

Exit.

Cha. He cooles, we must not leave him, we have no Such engine to remove the Admirall.

Exeunt

Enter King and the Admirall,

Kin. I prethee Philip be not so severe
To him I favour, tis an argument
That may serve one day to availe your selfe,
Nor Does it square with your so gentle nature,
To give such fires of envie to your bloud;
For how soeuer out of love to Justice,

C' 2

Your

Your Jealousie of that doth so incense you,

Yet they that censure it will say tis envy.

Adm. I serve not you for them, but sor your selfe, And that good in your Rule, that Iustice does you, And care not this what others say, so you Please but to doe me right for what you know.

King. You will not doe your selfe right, why should I-

Exceede you to your selfe?

Adm. My selfe am nothing

Compar'd to what I seeke, tis justice onely

The fount and flood, both of your strength and kingdomes.

King. But who knowes not, that extreame justice is (by all ruld lawes) the extreame of injurie,
And must to you be so, the persons that
Your passionate he te calls into question
Are great, and many, and may wrong in you
Your rights of kinde, and dignities of fortune,
And I advanc'd you not to heape on you
Honours, and fortunes, that by strong hand now
Held up, and over you, when heaven takes off
That powerfull hand 'should thunder on your head,
'And after you crush your surviving seedes.

Adm. Sir, your regards to both are great, and sacred,

But if the innocence, and right that rais'd me

And meanes for mine, can finde no friend hereafter

Of him that ever lives, and ever seconds

All Kings just bounties with defence, and refuge

In just mens races, let my fabricke ruine,

My stocke want sap, my branches by the roote

Be corne to death, and swept with whirlewindes out.

. King. For my love no relenting.

Adm. No my leige,

Tis for your love, and right that I stand out.

King. Bebetter yet advis'd.

Adm. I cannot Sir

Should any Oracle become my counsell,

For that I stand not out, thus of set will,

Or pride of any singular conceite,

My enemies, and the world may clearely know, Itaste no sweetes to drowne in others gall, And to affect in that which makes me lothed, To leave my selfe and mine expos'd to all The dangers you propos'd, my purchas'd honours, And all my fortunes in an instant lost; That mony, cares, and paines, and yeares have gather'd, How mad were I to rave thus in my wounds, Vnlesse my knowne health felt in these forc'd issues Were found, and fit, and that I did not know By most true proofes, that to become sincere With all mens hates, doth farre exceede their loves, To be as they are, mixtures of corruption? And that those envies that I see pursue me Of all true actions are the naturall consequents Which being my object, and my resolute choise Not for my good bur yours, I will have justice. King. You will have justice, is your will so strong Now against mine? your power being so weake Before my favour gave them both their forces Of all that ever shar'd in my free graces, You Philip Chabot a meane Gentleman Have not I rais'd you to a supremest Lord, And given you greater dignities than any?

Adm. You have so.

With the particulars to which I rais d you,
Have not I made you first a Knight of the Order,
Then Admirall of France, then Count Byzanges,
Lord, and Livetenant generall of all
My country, and command of Burgady;
Livetenant generall likewise of my sonne
Daulphine, and heire, and of all Normandy,
And of my chiefely honor'd privy Counsell,
And cannot all these powers weigh downers were

And cannot all these powers weigh downe your will?

Adm. No Sir, they were not given me to that end,

But to uphold my will, my will being just.

King. And who shall judge that Justice, you or I?

ARM de.

Adm. I Sir, in this case your royall thoughts are stilly Exempt from every curious search of one,

You have the generall charge with care of all.

Kin. And doe not generalls include particulars? May not I Judge of any thing comprized

In your particular as well as you?

Adm. Farre be the milery from you, that you may, My cares, paines, broken sleepe therein made more Than yours should make me see more, and my forces Render of better judgement.

King. Well Sir, grant

Your force in this my odds in benefits
Paid for your paines, put in the other scale,
And any equal holder of the ballance
Will shew my merits hoist up yours to aire
In rule of any doubt or deed betwixt us.

Adm. You merit not of me for benefits More than my selfe of you for services.

King. Ist possible.

King. Stand you on that?

Adm. I to the death, and will approve to all men.

Kin. I am deceiv'd, but I shall finde good Judges

That will finde difference.

Adm. Finde them being good.

King. Still so? what if conferring

My bounties, and your services to sound them,

We fall foule on some licences of yours,

Nay, give me therein some advantage of you.

Adm. They cannot.

King. Not in sifting their severe discharges

Of all your offices?

Adm. The more you sift. The more you shall refine mee.

King. What if I

Grant out against you a commission
Ioyn'd with an extraordinary processe
To arrest, and put you in lawes hands for trials.

Adm. Not with lawes uttermost.

King. Ilethrow the dice.

Adm. And Ile endure the chance,

The dice being square.

Adm. Repos'd in dreadlesse confidence, and conscience,

That all your most extreames shall never reach,

Or to my life, my goodes or honours breach:

King. Was ever heard to fine a confidence?
Must it not prove presumption, and can that
Scape brackes and errors in your search of law,
I prethee weigh yet, with more soule than danger,
And some lesse passion.

Adm. Witnesse heaven, I cannot!

Were I dissolv'd, and nothing else but soule.

King. Beshrew my blood, but his resolves amaze me;

Was ever such a Iustice in a subject,

Of so much office left to his owne swinge

That left to law thus, and his Soveraignes wrath,

Could stand cleare spight of both? let reason rule it

Before it come at law, a man so rare

In one thing cannot in the rest be vulgar,

And who sees you not in the broad high-way

The common dust up in your owne eyes, beating

In quest of riches, honours, offices,

As heartily in fhew as most believe,

And he that can use actions with the vulgar,

Must needes embrace the same effects, & cannot informe him!

Whatsoever he pretends, use them with such

Free equitie, as fits one just and reall,

Even in the eyes of men, nor stand at all parts

So truly circular, so sound, and solid,

But have his swellings out, his crackes and crannies?

And therefore in this reason, before law

Take you to her least you affect and flatter

Your selfe with mad opinions.

Adm. I were mad

Directly Sir, if I were yet to know

Not the sure danger, but the certaine ruine

Of men shot into law from Kings bent brow,
There being no dreame from the most muddie brain:
Vpon the soulest fancie, that can forge
More horrour in the shaddowes of meere fame,
Then can some Lawyer in a man exposed
To his interpretation by the King,
But these grave toyes I shall despise in death,
And while I live will lay them open so
(My inocence laid by them) that like soiles
They shall sticke of my merits tenne times more,
And make your bounties nothing, for who gives
And hits ith teeth, himselfe payes with the glory
For which he gave, as being his end of giving,
Not to crowne merits, or doe any good,
And so no thankes is due but to his glory.

King. Tisbrave I sweare.

Adm. No Sir, tis plaine, and rude
But true, and spotlesse, and where you object
My hearty, and grosse vulgar love of riches,
Titles, and honours, I did never seeke them
For any love to them, but to that justice
You ought to use in their due gift to merits,
To shew you royall, and most open handed,
Not using for hands talons, pincers, grapples;
In whose gripes, and upon whose gord point,
Deserts hang sprawling out their vertuous limbs,

King. Better and better.
Adm. This your glory is

My deserts wrought upon no wrêtchêd matter, But shew'd your royall palmes as free, and moist, As Ida, all enchast with silver springs,

And yet my merit still their equall sings.

King. Sing till thou sigh thy soule out hence, and leave us.

Adm. My person shall, my love and faith shall never.

King. Perish thy love, and faith, and thee for ever;

Whose there?

Enter Asall.

Let one goe for the Chancellor.

Asa. He's here in Court Sir. King. Haste and send him hither, This is an insolence I never met with,

Can one so high as his degrees ascend,

Clime all so free, and without staine?

Enter Chancellor. My Lord

Chancellor, I send for you about a service

Of equall price to me, as if againe

My ransome came to me from Pavian thraldome,

And more, as if from forth a subjects fetters,

The worst of servitudes my life were rescued.

Cha. You fright me with a Prologue of much trouble. King. Me thinkes it might be, tell me out of all

Your famous learning, was there ever subject

Rais'd by his Soveraignes free hand from the dust,

Vp 'to a height above Ayres upper region,

That might compare with him in any merit

That so advanc'd him? and not shew in that

Grosse over-weening worthy cause to thinke There might be other over-fights excepted

Of capitall nature in his sisted greatnesse.

Chan. And past question Sir, for one absur'd thing granted

A thousand follow.

King. You must then employ

Your most exact, and curious art to explore

A man in place of greatest trust, and charge,

Whom I suspect to have abus'd them all,

And in whom you may give such proud veines vent,

As will bewray their boyling bloud corrupted

Both gainst my crowne and life.

Cha. And may my life

Be curst in every act,

If I explore him not to every finer.

King. It is my Admirall.

Cha. Oh my good Leige

You tempt, not charge me with such search of him.

King. Doubt not my heartiest meaning, all the troubles

That ever mov'd in a distracted King,

Put

Put in just scare of his assaulted life Are not above my sufferings for Chabot.

Cha. Then I am glad, and proud that I can cure you,
For he's a man that I am studied in,
And all his offices, and if you please
To give authoritie.

King. You shall not want it.

Cha. If I discharge you not of that disease, About your necke growne, by your strange trust in him, With full discovery of the soulest treasons.

King. But I must have all prov'd with that free justice.

Cha. Beseech your Majestie doe not question ie.
King. About it instantly, and take me wholly

V pon your selfe.

Cha. How much you grace your servant?

King. Let it be fiery quicke.

Cha. It shall have wings,

And every feather, shew the flight of Kings.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Chancellor attended, the Proctor generall whispering in his eare. Two Indges following. They past.

Enter Chabot in his gowne, a gaurd about him, his father and his wife on each side, Allegre.

Adm. A Nd have they put my faithfull servant to the Heaven arme the honest man. (racke,

Fa. Allegre seeles the malice of the Chancellor.

Adm. Many upon the torture have confest

Things against truth, and yet his paine sits neerer

Than all my other seares, come don't weepe.

Wife. My Lord, I doe not grive out of a thought, Or poore suspition, they with all their malice Can staine your honour, but it troubles me, The King should grant this licence to your enemies, As he were willing to heare Chabot guilty.

Adm

Adm. No more, the King is just, and by exposing me To this triall, meanes to render me More happy to his subjects, and himselfe His sacred will be obey'd, take thy owne spirit, And let no thought infringe thy peace for me, I goc to have my honours all confirm'd; Farewell thy lip, my cause has so much innocence, It shanot neede thy prayer, I leave her yours Till my returne; oh let me be a sonne Exit. Still in your thoughts, now Gentlemen set forward. Manente Father and Wife.

Fa. See you that trust in greatnesse, what sustaines you, These hazards you must looke for, you that thrust Your heads into a cloud, where lie in ambush The souldiers of state in privy armes Of yellow fire jealous, and mad at all That shoote their foreheads up into their forges, And pry into their gloomy Cabbinets; You like vaine Citizens that must goe see Thoseever burning furnaces, wherein Your brittle glasses of estate are blowne; Who knowes not you are all but puffe, and bubble Ofbreath, and fume forg'd, your vile brittle natures Cause of your dearenesse? were you tough and lasting. You would be cheape, and not worth halfe your face, Now daughter Plannet strooke.

Wif. I am confidering

What forme I shall put on, as best agreeing

With my Lords fortune.

Fa. Habit doe you meane,

Of minde or body?

Wif. Both wod be apparell'd.

Fa. In neither you have reason yet to mourne.

Wif. He not accuse my heart of so much weakenesses Twere a confession gainst my Lord, The Queenc! Enter Queene, Constable, Treasurer, Secretary.

She has exprest 'gainst me some displeasure.

Fa. Lets this way through the Gallery.

Qu. Tis she,

Doe you my Lord say I wod speake with her?

And has Allegre, one of schiefest trust with him Suffered the rackes the Chancellor is violent;

And whats confest ?

Tre. Nothing, he contemn'd all.

That could with any cruelst paine explore him,
As if his minde had rob'd his nerves of sence,
And through them diffus'd fiery spirits above
All slesh and blood; for as his limbs were stretch'd,
His contempts too extended.

Qu. A strange sortitude!

Tre. But we shall lose th' arraignement.

Qu. The successe...

Will soone arrive.

Tre. Youle not appeare, my Lord then?

Con. I desire

Your Lordship wod excuse me.

Tre. We are your servants.

Exiunt. Tre & Sec.

Con. She attends you Madam.

Qu. This humblenesse proceedes not from your heart, Why, you are a Queene your selfe in your owne thoughts, The Admiralls wife of France cannot be lesse, You have not state enough, you shold not move Without a traine of friends and servants.

Wif. There is some mystery
Within your language Madam, I would hope
You have more charitie than to imagine
My present condition worth your triumph,
In which I am not so lost, but I have
Some friends and servants with proportion
To my Lords fortune, but none within the list
Of those that obey mee can be more ready
To expresse their duties, than my heart to serve
Your just commands.

Qu. Then pride will ebbe I see,
There is no constant flood of state, and greatnesse,
The prodigie is ceasing when your Lord

Comes to the ballance, hee whose blazing fires, Shot wonders through the Kingdome, will discover. What flying and corrupted matter fed him.

Wif. My Lord?

The man of conscience, the Oracle
Of State, whose honorable titles
Would cracke an Elephants backe, is now turn d mortall,
Must passe examination, and the test
Of Law, have all his offices rip dup,
And his corrupt soule laid open to the subjects,
His bribes, oppressions, and close sinnes that made
So many grone, and curse him, now shall finde
Their just reward, and all that love their country,
Blesse heaven, and the Kings Iustice, for removing
Such a devouring monster.

Fa. Sir your pardon

Madam you are the Queene, she is my daughter,
And he that you have character'd so monstrous,
My sonne in Law, now gon to be arraign'd,
The King is just, and a good man, but't does not
Adde to the graces of your royall person.
To tread upon a Lady thus dejected
By her owne griese, her Lord's not yet found guilty,

Much lesse condemn'd, though you have pleas'd to execute

Qu. What lawcy fellow's this?

(him.

Fa. I must confesse

I am a man out of this element
No Courtier, yet I am a gentleman
That dare speake honest truth to the Queenes eare,
(A duty every subject wonot pay you)
And justifie it to all the world, there's nothing
Doth more ecclipse the honours of our soule,
Than an ill grounded, and ill followed passion,
Let slie with noise, and license against those Whose hearts before are bleeding.

Con. Brave old man.

Fa. Cause you are a Queene to trample ore a woman,

D₃ Whose

Whose tongue and faculties are all tied up, Strike out a Lyons teeth, and pare his clawes, And then a dwarfe may plucke him by the beard, Tis a gay victory.

Qn, Did you heare my Lord?

Fa. I hadone.

I have not made this pause through service feare. Or guiltie apprehension of your rage, But with just wonder of the heates, and wildnesse Has prepossest your nature gainst our innocence, You are my Queene, unto that title bowes. The humblest knee in France, my heart made lower. With my obedience, and prostrate duty, Nor have I powers created for my use, When just commands of you expect their service; But were you Queene of all the world, or something. To be thought greater, betwixt heaven and us. That I could reach you with my eyes and voyce, I would shoote both up in desence of my. Abused honour, and stand all your lightning.

Qu. So brave.

Wif. So just and boldly innocent,
I cannot feare arm'd with a noble conscience
The tempest of your frowne, were it more frightfull
Then every fury made a womans anger,
Prepar'd to kill with deaths most horrid ceremony,
Yet with what freedome of my soule I can
Forgive your accusation of my pride.

Qu. Forgive? what insolence is like this language?

Can any action of ours be capable

Of thy forgivenesse? dust! how I dispise thee?

Can we sinne to be object of thy mercie?

Wif. Yes, and have dont already, and no staine To your greatnesse Madam, tis my charity I can remit, when soveraigne Princes dare Doe in jury to those that live beneath them, They turne worth pitty, and their pray rs, and tis

In the free power of those whom they oppresse: To pardon e'm, each soule has a prerogative, And priviledge royall that was fign'd by heaven, But though ith knowledge of my disposition Stranger to pride, and what you charge me with, I can forgive the injustice done to me, And striking at my person, I have no Commission from my Lord to cleere you for The wrongs you have done him, and still he pardon The wounding of his loyaltie, with which life Can hold no ballance, I must talke just boldnesse To fay

Fa. No more, now I must tell you daughter Least you forget your selfe, she is the Queene, And it becomes not you to vie with her Passion for passion, if your Lord stand fast To the full search of Law, Heaven will revenge him, And give him up precious to good mens loves If you attempt by these unruly wayes To vindicate his justice, Ime against you, Deere as I wish your husbands life and fame, Suffer are bound to suffer, not contest With Princes, fince their Will and Acts must be Accounted one day to a Judge supreme.

Wif. I ha done, if the devotion to my Lord, Or pietie to his innocence have led me Beyond the awfull limits to be observ'd By one so much beneath your sacred person, I thus low crave your royall pardon Madam; I know you will remember in your goodnesse, My life blood is concern'd while his least veine Shall runne blacke and polluted, my heart fed With what keepes him alive, nor can there be A greater wound than that which strikes the life Of our good name, so much above the bleeding. Of this rude pile wee carry, as the soule Hath excellence above this earth-borne frailty: My Lord, by the Kings will is lead already

To a severe arraignement, and to Judges, Will make no tender search into his tract. Of life and state; stay but a little while, And France shall eccho to his shame or innocence, This suit I begge with teares, I shall have forrow Enough to heare him censur'd foule and monstrous, Should you forbeare to antidate my sufferings.

Qu. Your conscience comes about, and you incline To teare he may be worth the lawes condemning. wif. I sooner will suspect the starres may lose Their way, and cristall heaven returne to Chaos; Truth sits not on her square more firme than he; Yet let me teil you Madam, were his life And action so foule as you have character'd, And the bad world expects, though as a wife Twere duty I should weepe my selfe to death, To know him falne from vertue, yet so much I a fraile woman love my King and Country, Ishould condemne him too, and thinke all honours The price of his lost faith more fatall to me, Than Cleopatra's aspes warme in my bosome, And as much boast their killing.

Qu. This declares

Another soule than was deliver d me, My anger melts, and I beginne to pitty her, How much a Princes eare may be abus'd? E 1joy your happie considence, at more leasure You may heare from us.

Wif. Heaven preserve the Queene,

And may her heart be charitable.

Fa. You blesse and honour your unworthy servant.

Qu. My Lord, did you observe this?

Con. Yes great Madam,

And read a noble spirit, which becomes The wife of Chabot, their great tie of marriage Is not more strong upon em, than their vertues.

Qu. That your opinion? I thought your judgement Against the Admirall, doe you thinke him honest?

Con. Religiously, a true, most zealous Patriot, And worth all royall favour.

Qu. You amaze ma,

Can you be just your selfe then, and advance

Your powers against bim?

Con. Such a will be farre

From Montmoranzie, Pioners ofstate
Have left no art togaine me to their faction,
And tis my misery to be plac'd in such
A sphere where I am whirl'd by violence
Of a sierce raging motion, and not what
My owne will would encline me. I shall make
This appeare Madam, if you please to second
My free speech with the King.

On. Good heaven protect all,

Haste to the King, Iustice her swift wing needes, Tis high time to be good, when vertue bleedes.

Exeunt.

Enter Officers before the Chancellor, Indges, the Proctor generall, whispering with the Chancellor, they take their places.

To them

Enter Treasurer and Secretary who take their places prepared on one side of the Court.

To them

The Captaine of the Guard, the Admiral following, who is placed at the barre.

Cha. Good Mr. Proctor generall begin.

Pro, It is not unknowne to you my very good Lords the Iudges, and indeed to all the world, for I will make short worke, since your honourable eares neede not to be enlarged. I speake by a figure with prolixe ennumeration how infinitly the King hath favoured this ill favoured Traitor; and yet I may worthily too insist and prove that no grace hathbeene so large and voluminous, as this, that he hath appointed such upright Iudges at this time, and the chiefe of this Triumvirie, our Chancellor by name Poyet, which deriveth from the Greeke his Etymology from Poyeni, which is to make, to create, to invent matter that was never extant in nature, from whence

whence also is the name and dignitie of Poeta, which I will not infilt upon, in this place, although I am confident his Lordshippe wanteth no facultie in making of Verses: but what addition I say is it to the honour of this Delinquent, that he hath such a sudge, a man so learned, so full of equity, so noble, so notable in the progresse of his life, so innocent, in the manage of his office so incorrupt; in the passages of State. so wise, in affection to his country so religious, in all his services to the King so fortunate, and exploring, as envie it selse cannot accuse, or malice vitiate, whom all lippes will. open to commend, but those of Philip; and in their hearts will erect Altars, and Statues, Columnes, and Obelishes, Pillars and Pyramids, to the perpetuitie of his name and memory. What shall I say i but conclude for his so great and sacred service, both to our King and Kingdome, and for their everlasting benefit, there may everlastingly be left here one of his loynes, one of his loynes ever remaine I say, and stay upon this, Beach, to be the example of all Iustice, even while the North and South Statre shall continue.

Cha. You expresse your Oratory Mr. Proctor,

I pray come presently to the matter.

Pro. Thus with your Lordships pardon, I proceede, and the first thing I shall glance at, will be worth your Lordships reflection, his ingratitude, and to whom ? to no lesse person than a King, and to what King, his owne, and our generall Soveraigne Prob deum at que hominum fidem; a King, and such a King, the health, life, and soule of us all, whose very mention drawes this salt water from my eyes; for hee indeede is our eye, who wakes and watches for us when we sleepe, and who will not sleepe for him, I meane not sleepe, which the Philosophers call, a naturall cessation of the common and consequently of all the exterior sences, caused first and immediatly by a detention of spirits, which can have no communication, since the way is obstructed, by which these spirits should commearce, by vapours ascending from the stomacke to the head, by which evaporation the rootes of the nerves are filled, through which the annuall spirits, to be powred into the dwellings of the externall sences; but seepe

I take for death, which all know to be Ultima linea, who will not sleepe eternally for such a King as wee enjoy? If therefore in generall as hee is King of us all, all sharing and dividing the benefits of this our Soveraigne, noneshould be so ingratefull as once to murmire against him, what shall be said of the ingratitude more monstrous in this Chabot, for our Francis hath loved, not in generall & in the croud with other subjects, but particularly this Philip advanc'd him to the supreme dignitie of a Statsman, lodg'd him in his very heart, yet Monstrum horrendum : even to this Francis hath Philip beene ingratefull. Brueus the loved sonne hath stabbed Casar with a Bodkin: Oh what brute may be compared to him? and in what particulars may this crime be exemplified; hee hath, as wee say, chopt Logicke with the King, nay to the very teeth of his Soveraigne advance his owne Gnat-like merits, and justified with Luciferous pride, that his services have deserved more than all the bounty of our Munificent King hath paid him.

Cha. O'sserve that my Lords.

Pro. Nay he hath gone further, and most traiterously hath committed outrage and impiety to the Kings owne hand, and royall character, which presented to him in a bill from the whole counsell, hee most violently did teare in peeces, and will doe the very body and person of our King, if your Justice make no timely prevention, and strike out the Serpentine teeth of this high, and more than horrible monster.

Tr. This was enforced home.

12 1

Pro. In the next place I will relate to your honours his most cruell exactions upon the subject, the old vantcurriers of rebellions. In the yeare 1536 and 37. This oppressour, and this extortioner, under pretext of his due taxation, being Admirall impos'd upon certaine Fishermen, (observe I besech you the circumstance of their persons, Fishermen) who poore lohns were embarqued upon the cost of Normandy, and fishing there for Herrings (which some say is the king of Fishes) he impos'd I say twenty souse, and upon every boate sixe liners; oh intollerable exaction! enough not onely to alienate the hearts of these miserable people from their King, which Ipso salto is high treason, but an occasion of a greater inconveni-

by this might enfue a necessitie of mortall sins, by breaking the religious fast upon Vigils, Embers, and other dayes commanded by sacred authority, besides the miserable rut that would follow, and perhaps contagion, when feasting and sless should be licenced for every carnall appetite. — I could urge many more particulars of his dangerous insatiate and boundlesse Avarice, but the improvement of his estate in so sew yeares, from a private Gentlemans fortune, to a great Dukes revenewes, might save our soveraigne therein an Orator to enforce and prove faulty even to gyantisme against heaven.

Indg. This is but a noise of words.

Pro. To the foule outrages so violent, let us adde his Com? mission s granted out of his owne presum'd authoritie, his Majestie neither infround or respected his disloyalties, infidelities, contempts, oppressions, extortions, with innumerable abules, offences, and forfeits, both to his Majesties most royall person, crowne, and dignitie, yet notwithstanding all these injustices, this unmatchable, unjust delinquent affecteth to be thought inculpable, and incomparable just; but also my most learned Lord; none knowes better than your selves, how easie the sinceritie of Justice is pretended, how hard it is to be performed, and how common it is for him that hath least colour of title to it, to be thought the very substance and soule of it, he that was never true scholler in the least degree, longs as a woman with child to be great with scholler, she that was never with child longs. Omnibus vis & modis to be got with child, and will weare a cushion to seeme with child, and hee that was never just, will fly in the Kings face to be counted just, though for all he be nothing, but just, a Traytor.

Sec. The Admirall smile's.

- Jud: Answer your selfe my Lord.

Adm. I shall, and briefely,

The furious eloquence of my accuser hath Branch'd my offences hainous to the King, And then his subject, a most vast indictment, That to the King I have justified my morit, And services; which conscience of that truth,

That gave my actions life when they are questioned, I ought to urge agen, and doe without The least part of injustice; for the Bill A foule, and most unjust one, and prefer'd Gainst the Kings honour, and his subjects priviledge, And with a policie to betray my office, And faith to both, I doe confesse I tore it, It being prest immodestly, but without A thought of disobedience to his name, To whose mention I bow, with humble reverence, And dare appeale to the Kings knowledge of me, How farre I am in soule from such a rebell, For the rest my Lord, and you my honour'd Judges, Since all this mountaine all this time in labour With more than mortall fury gainst my life, or with the Hath brought forth nought but some ridiculous vermines I will not wrong my right, and innocence, and innocence, With any serious plea in my reply, To frustrate breath, and fight with terrible shaddow That have beene forg'd, and forc'd against my state, in sold a But leave all, with my life to your free censures; Onely beseeching all your learned judgements

Equall and pious conscience to weigh.

Pro. And how this great and mighty fortune hath exalted him to pride is apparant, not onely in his braves and bearings to the King, the fountaine of all this increase, but in his contempt and scorne of the subject, his vast expences in buildings, his private bounties, above royall to souldiers and schollers, that he may be the Generall and Patron, and protector of armes and arts; the number of domesticke attendants, an army of Grashoppers and gay Butterslies able to devoure the Spring; his glorious wardrobes, his stable of horses that are prick'd with provendet, and will enforce us to weede up our Vineyards to sow Oates for supply of their provision, his caroches shining with gold, and more bright than the charior of the Sunne, wearing out the pavements; nay, he is of late so transcendently proud, that men must be his Mules, and carry him up and downe as it were in a Procession for men to gaze

E .: 3

ac.c

portable pride, and who knowes but this may prove a fashion? But who grones for this? the subject, who murmure, and are ready to beginne a rebellion, but the tumultuous saylers, and water-rats, who runne up and downe the citie, like an overbearing tempest, cursing the Admirall, who in duty ought to undoe himself for the generall satisfaction of his countrymen.

Adm. The varietie, and wonder now presented
To your most noble notice, and the worlds,
That all my life and actions, and offices,
Explor'd with all the hundred eyes of Law
Lighted with lightning, shot out of the wrath
Of an incenst, and commanding King,
And blowne with foes, with farre more bitter windes,
Then Winter from his Easterne cave exhailes,
Yet nothing found, but what you all have heard,
And then consider if a peere of State,
Should be expos'd to such a wild arraignement
For poore complaints, his fame, faith, life, and honours
Rackt for no more.

Cha. No more? good heaven, what say

As capitall, and worth this high arraignement
To me seeme strange, because they doe not fall
In force of Law, to arraigne a Peere of State,
For all that Law can take into her power
To sentence, is the exaction of the Fishermen?

2 Iu. Here is no majesty violated, I consent to what my Brother has exprest.

Cha, Breake then in wonder,
My frighted words out of their forming powers,
That you no more collect, from all these forfeits
That Mr. Proctor generall hath opened,
With so apparant, and impulsive learning,
Against the rage and madnesse of the offender,
And violate Majestie (my learned assistants)
When Majesties affronted and defied

As leap'd into his throate? his life affrighting?

Be justified in all insolence, all subjects

If this be so considered, and insult

Vpon your priviledg'd malice, is not Majestic

Poyson'd in this wonder! and no selony set

Where royaltie is rob'd, and

Fie how it sights with Law, and grates upon

Her braine and soule, and all the powers of Reason,

Reporter of the processe, shew the sedule.

No. Here my good Lord.

1. No altering it in us...

2. Farrebeit from us Sir.

Cha. Heres silken Iustice,

It might be altered, mend your sentences.

Both. Not wee my Lord.

You sight a duty to his will, and safety, Give me your pen, it must be capitall.

I. Make what you please my Lord, our doome shall stand,

Cha. Thus I subscribe, now at your perills follow.

Both. Perills my Lord? threates in the Kings free justice?

Tre, I am amaz'd they can be so remisse.

Sec. Mercifull men, pittifull Iudges certaine.

On this side, and on this side, this capitall I,
Both which together put, import plaine Vi;
And witnesse we are forc'd.

2. Enough,

It will acquit us when we make it knownes

Our names are forc'd.

Cha. Is traiterous pride

Vpon the royall person of a King

Were sentenc'd unfelloniously before,

Ile burne my Bookes and be a Judge no more?

Both. Here are our hands subscrib'd,

Cha. Why so, it joyes me,

You have reform'd your justice and your judgement,

Now

Now have you done like Iudges and learned Lawyers,
The King shall thanke, and honour you for this.

Notary read.

No. We by his sacred Majestie appointed Judges, upon due triall, and examination Of Philip Chabot Admirall of France

Declare him guiltie of high treasons, &c.

Cha. Now Captaine of the gaurd, secure his person,

Till the King signifie

His pleasure for his death, this day is happy To France, thus reskued from the vile devourer.

A shoute within.

Harke how the votes applaud their blest deliverance, You that so late did right and conscience boast, Heavens mercy now implore, the Kings is lost.

Exeunt,

Actus Quartus.

Enter King, Queene, and Constable.

Kin. Y Ou raise my thoughts to wonder, that you Madam, And you my Lord, unite your force to pleade

Ith' Admiralls behalfe, this is not that

Language you did expresse, when the torne Bill

Was late pretended to us, it was then
Desiance to our high prerogative,

The act of him whose proud heart would rebell

And arm'd with faction, too loone attempt To teare my crowne off.

Qu. I was ignorant

Then of his worth, and heard but the report

Of his accusers, and his enemies,

Who never mention in his character

Shadowes of any vertue in those men,

They would depresse like Crowes, and carrier birds,

They fly ore flowrie Meades, cleare Springs, faire Gardens, And stoope at carcasses; for your owne honour

Pitty

Pitty poore Chabot.

What could so lately straddle ore a Province, Can he be fallen so low, and miserable, To want my pitty, who breakes so th like day, Takes up all peoples eyes, and admiration? It cannot be, he hath a Princely wife too.

Qu. I interpole not often Sir, or presse you With unbecomming importunitie,
To serve the prositable ends of others
Conscience, and duty to your selfe inforce
My present mediation, you have given
The health of your owne state away, unlesse
Wisedome in time recover him.

King. If he proove

No adulterate gold, triall confirmes his value.

Qu. Although it hold in mettle gracious Sir, Such fiery examination, and the furnace May wast a heart thats faithfull, and together With that you call the feces, something of The precious substance may be hazarded.

King. Why, you are the chiefe engine rais'd against him, And in the worlds Creede labour most to sinke him, That in his fall, and absence every beame May shine on you, and onely guild your fortune, Your difference is the ground of his arraignement, Nor were we unfollicited by you, To have your bill confirm'd, from that that spring ame all these mighty and impetuous waves, With which he now must wrastle, if the strength Of his owne innocence can breake the storme, Truth wonot lose her servant, her wings cover him, He must obey his fate.

Con. I would not have
It lie upon my fame, that I should be
Mentioned in Story his unjust supplanter
For your whole Kingdome, I have beene abused,
And made believe my suite was just and necessary,

F

My walkes have not beene safe, my closet prayers,
But some plot has pursued me, by some great ones
Against your noble Admirall, they have frighted
My fancy into my dreames with their close whispers,
How to uncement your affections,
And render him the table, and the scorne
Of France.

Qu. Brave Montmorancie.

King. Are you serious.

My selfe your creature, dignified and honor'd
By your high favours with an equal truth,
I must declare the justice of your Admirall
(In what my thoughts are conscious) and will rather
Give up my claime to birth, title, and offices,
Be throwne from your warme smile, the top and crowne
Of subjects happinesse, then be brib'd with all
Their glories to the guilt of Chabots ruine.

King. Come, come, you over act this passion,

And if it be not pollicie it talts

Too greene, and wants some counsell to mature it,

His fall prepares your triumph.

Con. It confirmes

My shame alive, and buried will corrupt
My very dust, make our house-genious grone,
And sright the honest marble from my ashes:
His fall prepare my triumph? turne me first
A naked exile to the world.

King. No more,
Take heede you banish not your selse, be wise,
And let not too much zeale devoure your reason.

Enter Asall.

As. Your Admirall Is condemn'd Sir?

King. Ha strange! no matter, Leave us, a great man I see may be As soone dispatch'd, as a common subject. Qu. No mercy then for Chabet.

Enter Wife and Father.

Wif. From whence came

That sound of Chabot? then we are all undone: Oh doe not heare the Queene, she is no friend To my poore Lord, but made against his life,

Which hath too many enemies already.

Con. Poore soule, shee thinkes the Queene is still against Who employeth all her powers to preserve him. (him,

Fa. Say you so my Lord? daughter the Queen's our friend.

Wif. Why doe you mocke my forrow! can you flatter

Your owne griefe so, be just, and heare me sir,

And doe not facrifice a subjects blood

To appeale a wrathfull Queene, let mercy shine Vpon your brow, and heaven will pay it backe Vpon your soule, be deate to all her prayers.

King. Poore heart, the knowes not what the has defir'd.

Wif. I begge my Chab its life, my sorrowes yet

Have not destroid my reason.

King. He is in the power of my Lawes, not mine.

Wif. Then you have no power,

And are but the emptie shadow of a King,
To whom is it resign'd? where shall I begge
The forfeit life of one condemn'd by Lawes
To partiall doome?

King. You heare he is condemn'd then?

Fa. My sonne is condemn'd sir.

King. You know for what too.

Fa. What the Iudges please to call it,

But they have given't a name, Treason they say.

Qu. I must not be denied.

King. I must deny you.

Wif. Be blest for ever fort.

Qu. Grant then to her.

King. Chabot condemn'd by law?

Fa. But you have power

To change the rigor, in your breast there is

A Chancellor above it, I nere had

A suite before, but my knees joyne with hers

F 2

To

To implore your royall mercy to her Lord, And take his cause to your examination, It cannot wrong your sudges, if they have Beene steer'd by conscience.

Con. It will fame your Iustice.

King. I cannot be prescrib'd, you kneele in vaine, You labour to betray me with your teares
To a treason above his, gainst my owne Lawes,
Looke to the Lady

Exeunt.

Enter Asall.

As. Sir the Chancellor.

King. Admit him, leave us all.

Enter Chancellor.

How now my Lord?

You have lost no time, and how thrive the proceedings.

Cha. Twas fit my gracious Soveraigne, time should leave

His motion made in all affaires beside,

And spend his wings onely in speed of this.

King. You have shew'd diligence, and whats become

Of our most curious Iusticer, the Admirall?

Cha. Condemn'd sir utterly, and all hands set To his conviction.

King. And for faults most foule?

Cha, More than most impious, but the applausive issue Strooke by the concourse of your ravish'd subjects
For joy of your free Iustice, if there were
No other cause to assure the sentence just

Were proofe convincing.

King. Now then he lees cleerely
That men perceive how vaine his Instice was,
And scorne him for the foolish net he wore
To hide his nakednesse; ist not a wonder
That mens ambitions should so blinde their reason
To affect shapes of honesty, and take pride
Rather in seeming, then in being just.

Cha. Seeming has better fortune to attend it

Then being found at heart, and vertuous.

King. Professe all? nothing doe, like those that live

By looking to the Lamps of holy Temples,
Who still are busie taking off their snuffes,
But for their profit sake will adde no oyle;
So these will checke and sentence every same,
The blaze of riotous blood doth cast in others,
And in themselves leave the sume most offensive,
But he to doe this? more deceives my judgement
Than all the rest whose nature I have sounded.

Cha. I know Sir, and have prov'd it.

King. Well my Lord

To omit circumstance, I highly thanke you For this late service you have done me here,

Which is so great and meritorious

That with my ablest power I scarce can quit you.

Cha. Your sole acceptance (my dread soveraigne)

I more rejoyce in, than in all the fortunes
That ever chanc'd me, but when may it please

Your Highnesse to order the execution?

The haste thus farre hath spar'd no pinions.

King. No my Lord, your care
Hath therein much deserv'd.

(ha. But where proportion

Is kept toth' end in things, at start so happy

That end fet on the crowne.

King. Ile speede it therefore.

Cha. Your thoughts direct it, they are wing'd. Exit.

King. I joy this boldnesse is condemn'd, that I may pardon,

And therein get some ground in his opinion

By so much bounty as saves his life,

And me thinks that weigh'd more, should sway the ballance

Twixt me and him, held by his owne free Iustice,

For I could never finde him obstinate

In any minde he held, when once he faw

Th' error with which he laboured, and since now

He needs must feele it, I admit no doubt,

But that his alteration will beget

Another sence of things twi xt him and me;

Whose there?

Enter Asalls
F 3

Go€

Goe to the Captaine of my guard, and will him To attend his condemn'd prisoner to me instantly.

As. Ishall sir. Enver Treasurer & Secretary.

King. My Lords, you were spectators of our Admirall.

Tre. And hearers too of his most just conviction,

In which we witnest over-weight enough

In your great bounties, and as they there were weigh'd

With all the feathers of his boasted merits.

King. Has felt a scorching triall, and the test
(That holds fires utmost force) we must give mettalls
That will not with the hammer, and the melting
Confesse their truth, and this same sence of feeling
(Being ground to all the sences) hath one key
More than the rest to let in through them all
The mindes true apprehension, that thence takes
Her sirst convey d intelligence. I long
To see this man of considence agen:
How thinke you Lords, will Chabot looke on mee,
Now spoild of the integrity, he boasted?

Sec. It were too much honour to vouchsafe your sight.

Tr. No doubt my Leigh, but he that hath offended Insuch a height against your crowne and person, Will want no impudence to looke upon you.

Enter Asall, Captaine, Admirall.

Cap. Sir, I had charge given me by this Gentleman To bring your condemn'd prisoner to your presence.

King, You have done well, and tell the Queene, and our

Lord Constable we desire their presence, bid Our Admiralls Lady, and her father too

Attendus here, they are but new withdrawne.

As. I shall sir!

Tre. Doe you observe this confidence? He stands as all his triall were a dreame.

Sec. Hele finde the horrour waking, the King's troubled; Now for a thunder-clap: the Queene and Constable. Enter Queene, Constable, Wife and Father.

Tr. I doe not like their mixture.

King, My Lord Admirall,

You made it your desire to have this triall That late hath past upon you; And now you seele how vaine is too much faith And flattery of your selfe, as if your brest Were proofe gainst all invasion, tis so slight You see it lets in death, whats past, hath beene To satisfie your insolence, there remaines That now we serve our owne free pleasure, therefore By the t most absolute power, with which all right Puts in my hands, these issues turnes, and changes, I here in eare of all these, pardon all Your faults and forfeits, what soever sensur'd, Againe advancing, and establishing
Your person in all sulnesse of that state That ever you enjoy'd before th' attainder. 7 re. Wonderfull, pardon'd!

Wif. Heaven preserve the King.

Qu. Who for this will deserve all time to honour him.

Con. And live Kings best example.

Fa. Sonne yare pardon'd,

Be sare you looke hereaster well about you.

Adm. Vouchsafe great Sir to assure me what you said,

You nam'd my pardon.

King. And agen declare it,

For all crimes past, of what nature foever.

Adm. You cannot pardon me Sir:

King. How's that Philip?

Adm. It is a word carries too much relation To an offence, of which I am not guilty, And I must still be bold where truth still armes, In spight of all those frownes that would deject me To say I neede no pardon.

King. Ha, howesthis? Fa. Hees mad with over-joy, and answers nonsence. King. Why, tell me Chabot, are not you condemn'd?

Adm. Yes, and that justifies me much the more, For whatsoever false report hath brought you, I was condemn'd for nothing that could reach

To prejudice my life, my goods or honour,

As first in sirmenesse of my conscience,

I considently told you, not alas

Presuming on your slender thred of favour,

Or pride of fortunate and courtly boldnesse,

But what my faith and justice bade me trust too,

For none of all your learned assistant Judges,

With all the malice of my crimes could urge,

Or felony or hurt of sacred power.

King. Doe any heare this, but my selfe? My Lords,
This man still instiffes his innocence.

This man still justifies his innocence,
What prodigies are these? have not our Lawes
Past on his actions, have not equal Iudges
Certified his arraignement, and him guilty
Of capitall Treason? and yet doe I heare
Chabot accuse all these, and quit himselfe.

Tr. It does appeare distraction sir.

King. Did we

Seeme so indulgent to propose our free

And royall pardon without suite or prayer,

To meete with his contempt?

Sec. Vnhear'd of impudence!

Ad. I were malicious to my selse, and desperate To force untruths upon my soule, and when T is cleare, to confesse a shame to exercise Your pardon sir, were I so soule and monstrous As I am given to you, you would commit A sinne next mine, by wronging your owne mercy To let me draw out impious breath, it will Release your wonder, if you give command To see your processe, and if it prove other Than I presume to informe, teare me in peeces.

King Goe for the Processe and the Chancellor.

King. Goe for the Processe, and the Chancellor, With the assistant Judges. I thanke heaven That with all these inforcements of distraction My reason stayes so cleare to heare, and answer, And to direct a message. This inversion Of all the loyalties, and true deserts

That

Exit As.

That I beleev'd I govern'd with, till now In my choice Lawyers, and chiefe Counsellors Is able to shake all my frame of reason.

Adm. I am much griv'd.

King. No more, I doe incline To thinke I am abus'd, my Lawes betrai'd And wrested to the purpose of my Judges, This confidence in Chabot turnes my judgement, This was too wilde away to make his merits Stoope and acknowledge my superior bounties, That it doth raise, and fixe e'm past my art, To shadow all the shame and forfeits mine.

Enter Asall, Chancellor, Indges.

As. The Chancellor and Judges Sir.

Tre. I like not warm sally and market of the

This passion in the King, the Queene and Constable Are of that side.

King. My Lord, you dare appeare then?

Cha. Dare Sir, I hope.

King. Well done, hope still, and tell me,

Is not this man condemn'd?

Cha. Strange question Sir,

The processe will declare it, sign'd with all These my assistant brothers reverend hands To his conviction in a publike triall.

King. You said for foule and monstrous facts prov'd by line.

Cha. The very words are there sir.

King. But the deedes

I looke for sir, name me but one that's monstrous? Cha. His foule comparisons, and affronts of you,

To me seem'd monstrous.

King. I told you them sir,

Nor were they any that your so vast knowledge, Being a man studied in him, could produce And prove as cleare as heaven, you warranted To make appeare such treasons in the Admirall, As never all Lawes, Volumes yet had sentenc'd,

And France should looke on, having scap'd with wonder

in a sit of me we what

What in this nature, hath beene cleerely prov'd In his arraignement.

1. Nothing that we heard

In slendrest touchurg'd by your Advocate.

King. Dare you affirme this too?

2. Most confidently.

King, No base corruptions charg'd upon him.

I. None sir.

Tr. This argues Chabot has corrupted him.

Sec. I doe not like this.

T. The fumme of all

Wasurg'd to prove your Admirall corrupt,

Was an exaction of his officers,

Of twenty souse taken from the Fishermen

For every boate, and that fish'd the Normand coast.

King. And was this all.

The mountaines, and the marvells promist me,

To be in cleere proofe made against the life

Of our so hated Admirall.

Ind. All sir,

V pon our lives and consciences.

Cha. Iamblasted:

King. How durst you then subscribe to his conviction.

1. For threats by my Lord Chancellor on the Bench, Affirming that your Majestie would have it

Made capitali treason, or account us traitors.

2. Yet fir, we did put to our names with this-

Interpolition of a note in lecret

In these two letters U, and I, to shew

Wee were enforc'd to what we did, which then

In Law is nothing.

Fa. How doe you feele your Lordship. Did you not finde some stuffing in your head. Your braine should have beene purg'd.

Cha. I fall to peeces,

Would they had rotted on the Bench.

King. And so you sav'd the peace of that high Court. Which otherwise his impious rage had broken,

A.

But thus am I by his malicious arts

A parly rendred, and most tyrannous spurre To all the open course of his base envies, A forcer of my Iudges, and a thirst Of my nobilities blood, and all by one, I trusted to make cleere my love of Iustice.

Cha. I beseech your Majestie, let all my zeale To serve your vertues, with a sacred value Made of your royall state, to which each least But shade of violence in any subject

Doth provoke certaine death.

King. Death on thy name And memory for ever, one command Our Advocate attend us presently.

As. He waites here.

As, He waites here.

King. But single death shall not excuse, thy skinne Torne ore thine eares, and what else can be inflicted? If thy life with the same severity Dissected cannot stand so many fires.

Sec. Tre. Be mercifull great Sir.

King. Yet more amaze? In control in the land Is there a knee in all the world beside That any humane conscience can let bow with shade and the For him, yare traitors all that pitty him.

Tr. This is no time to move. The fact of the state of the King. Yet twas my fault To trust this wretch, whom I knew sierce and proud With formes of tongue and learning, what a prisoner Is pride of the whole flood of man? for as A humane seede is said to be a mixture And faire contemperature extracted from the contemperature All our best faculties, so the seede of all Mans sensuall frailty, may be said to abide, and say the And have their confluence in onely pride, and it to some sold to It stupisies mans reason so, and dulls True sence of any thing, but what may fall and be a said. In his owne glory, quenches all the spirits and ontiled at I

That light a man to honour and true goodnesse. As. Your Advocate. Enter Advecate.

King

Ring. Come hither.

Adv. My most gracious Soveraigne.

Adm. Madam you infinitely oblige our duty.

Qu. I was too long ignorant of your worth my Lord, And this sweete Ladies vertue.

Wif. Both your servants.

Adm. I never had a feare of the Kings Iustice, And yet I know not what creepes ore my heart, And leaves an ice beneath it, my Lord Chancellor,

You have my forgivenesse, but implore heaven's pardon

For wrongs to equall justice, you shall want

Nó charitie of mine to mediate ilest all be a second

To the King for you.

Cha. Horrour of my soule:

Confounds my gratitude:

Con. To me now most welcome:

Adv. It was my allegiance fir, I did enforce; But by directions of your Chancellor,

It was my office to advance your cause

Gainst all the world, which when I leave to execute,

Flea me, and turne me out a most raw Advocate.

King. You see my Chancellor.

Adv. He has an ill tooks with him?

King. It shall be your province now, on our behalfes

Tourge what can in justice be against him, which him, which him takes and corrupt actions His riot on our Lawes, and corrupt actions

Will give you leope and field enough.

Adv. And I areol Sug no. 100

Will play my law prize, never feare It fir, all the serial

He shall be guilty of what you please, I am studied

In him sir, I will squeeze his villanies,

And urge his acts so whom into his bowells,

The force of it shall make him hang himselfe,

King. Iudges, for allem and ward guids you and south The poisonous outrage, that this viper spile On all my royall-freedome and my Empire, As making all but servants to his malice,

I will have you revise the late arraignement, And for those worthy reasons, that already Affect you for my Admiralls acquitall Employ your justice on this Chancellor, away with him, Arrest him Captaine of my guard to answer All that due course of Law against him can Charge both his Acts and life.

Cap. I doe arrest thee

Poyet Lord Chancellor in his Highnesse name, To answer all that equals course of Law Can charge thy acts and life with.

Cha. I Obey.

King. How false a heart corruption has, how base: Without true worth are all these earth-bred glories? Oh blessed justice, by which all things stand, That stills the thunder, and makes lightning finke Twixt earth and heaven amaz'd, and cannot Arike, Being prov'd so now in wonder of this man, The object of mens hate, and heavens bright love And as in cloudy dayes, we see the Sunne Elide over turrets, temples, richest fields, All those left darke, and slighted in his way, And on the wretched plight of some poore shed, Powres all the glories of his golden head: So heavenly vertue, on this envied Lord, Points all his graces, that I may dinstinguish district Him better from the world.

Tre. You doe him right.

כשתול עם בפון בנו בנועו King. But away Indges, and pursue the arraignement Of this polluted Chancellor with that swiftnesse, 15,510 N His fury wing'd against my Admirall, if a mail hab sais !!! And be you all, that sate on him compurgators Of me against this false Judge.

Jud. We are 10. 200 m and many many in the state of the s

King. Beyou two joyn'd in the commission, was said of And nothing urg'd but justly, of me learning. It some the This one more lesson out of the events and the lesson with the lesson of the events and the lesson of the events are the even Of these affaires now past, that what soever harge:

Charge or Commission Iudges have from us, They ever make their ayme ingenuous Iustice, Not partiall for reward, or swelling favour, To which if your King steere you, spare to obey; For when his troubled blood is cleere, and calme. He will repent that he pursued his rage, Before his pious Law, and hold that Iudge Vnworthy of his place, that lets his censure Flote in the waves of an imagin'd favour, This ship wracks in the haven, and but wounds Their consciences that sooth the soone etb'd humours Of their incensed King.

Con. Tre. Royall and sacred.

King. Come Philip, shine thy honour now for ever, For this short temporall ecclipse it suffer'd By th' interpos'd desire I had to try thee, Nor let the thought of what is past affict thee, For my unkindnesse, live still circled here, The bright intelligence of our royall spheere.

Astus Quintus.

Enter Queene, Constable, Father.

Qu. The Admirall sicke?

Fa. With danger at the heart,

I came to tell the King.

Con. He never had

More reason in his soule, to entertaine
All the delights of health.

All the delights of health.

Fa. I feare my Lord, Some apprehension of the Kings unkindnesse, By giving up his person, and his offices To the Lawes gripe and search, is ground of his Sad change, the greatest foules are thus oft wounded, If he vouchsafe his presence, it may quicken His fast decaying spirits, and prevent

The halty ebbe of life.

Qn. The King is now
Fraught with the joy of his fresh preservation,
The newes so violent, let into his eare,
May have some dangerous effect in him,
I wod not counsell sir to that,

I may suspect they'le spread my Lord, and as A river lest his curl'd and impetuous waves Over the bankes, by consuence of streames That fill and swell her channell, for by this time He has the addition of Allegres suffering, His honest servant, whom I met though seeble And worne with torture, going to congratulate. His Masters safetie.

Qu. It seemes he much

Affected that Allegre.

Con. There will be

But a sad interview and dialogue.

Qu. Does he keepe his bed?

Fa. Inthat alone

He shewes a fortitude, he will move, and walke. He sayes while his owne strength or others can Support him, wishing he might stand and looke. His destiny in the sace at the last summon, Not sluggishly exhaile his soule in bed, With indulgence, and nice stattery of his limbs.

Qu. Can he in this shew spirit, and want force

To wrastle with a thought?

Fa. Oh Madam, Madam,

We may have proofe against the sword, and tyranny Of boysterous warre that threatens us, but when Kings froune, a Cannon mounted in each eye, Shoote death to apprehension, ere their fire And sorce approach us.

Enter King.

Con. Here's the King.

Qu. No words To interrupt his quiet.

Fa. Ile begon then.

King. Our Admiralls father! call him backe.

Qu. I wonot stay to hearce'm.

Exit.

Con. Sir, be prudent,

And doe not for your sonne fright the Kings health. Exit.

King. What, ha they left us? how does my Admirall?

Fa. I am forbid to tell you sir.

King. By whom.

Fa. The Queene and my Lord Constable.

King. Are there

Remaining seedes of faction? have they soules
Not yet convinc'd ith truth of Chabots honour,
Cleare as the christall heaven, and bove the reach
Of imitation.

Fa. Tis their care of you,

And no thought prejudiciall to my sonne.

How can the knowledge of my Admiralls state
Concerne their seares of me, I see their envie
Of Chabots happinesse, whose joy to be
Rendr'd so pure and genuine to the world
Doth grate upon their conscience and affright em;
But let em vexe, and bid my Chabot still
Exalt his heart, and triumph, he shall have
The accesse of ours, the kingdome shall put on Such joyes for him as she would bost to celebrate
Her owne escape from ruine.

Fa. He is not in state to heare my sad newes

I perceive.

King. That countenance is not right, it does not answer What I expect,

Say, how is my Admirall?
The truth upon thy life.

Fa. To secure his, I would you had.

King Ha? Who durst oppose him?

Fa. One that hath power enough hath practifed on him And made his great heart stoope.

King. I will revenge it

With crushing, crushing that rebellious power to nothing. Name him.

Fa. He was his friend.

King. A friend to malice, his owne blacke impoltume Burne his blood up, what mischiefe hath ingendred New stormes?

Fa. Tis the old tempest.

King. Did not we

Appease all horrors that look'd wilde upon him?

Fa. You drest his wounds I must confesse, but made
No cure, they bleede a fresh, pardon me sir,
Although your conscience have clos'd too soone,
He is in danger, and doth want new surgerie
Though he be right in fame, and your opinion,
He thinkes you were unkinde.

King. Alas poore Chabot,

Doth that afflict him.

Fa. So much, though he strive
With most resolv'd and Adamantine nerves,
As ever humane fire in flesh and blood,
Forg'd for example, to beare all, so killing
The arrowes that you shot were (still your pardon)
No Centaures blood could rancle so.

King. If this

Be all, ile cure him, Kings retaine

More Balsome in their soule then hurt in anger.

Fa. Farre short sir, with one breath they uncreate,
And Kings with onely words more wounds can make
Then all their kingdome made in balme can heale,
Tis dangerous to play to wilde a descant
On numerous vertue, though it become Princes
To assure their adventures made in every thing,
Goodnesse confin'd within poore sless and blood,
Hath but a queazie and still sickly state,
A musicall hand should onely play on her
Fluent as ayre, yet every touch command.

King. No more,

Commend us to the Admirall, and say,

H

The King will visite him, and bring health.

Fa. I will not doubt that blessing, and shall move Nimbly with this command. Exeunt.

Enter Officers before, Treasurer, Secretary, and Indges, attended by Petitioners, the Advocate also with many papers in his hand, they take their places.

The Chancellor with a guard, and plac'd at the Barre.

Tre. Did you believe the Chancellor had beene

So foule?

Sec. Hee's lost toth' people, what contempts They throw upon him? but we must be wise.

Vpon the Admirall, in orebearing justice, Would well deserve a sentence.

Tre. And a deepe onc.

Was specially commended by the King,

As being most blemish to his royall person.

As being most blemish to his royall person,

And the free justice of his state.

Tre. Already He has confest upon his examinations

Enough for sensure, yet to obey forme

Mr. Advocate if you please ____

Adv. I am ready for your Lordships: It hath beene said, and will be said agen, and may truely be justified, Omnia exlite sieri. It was the position of Philosophers, and now proved by a more Philosophycall sect, the Lawyers, that Omnia exlite siant, we are all made by Law, made I say, and worthily if we be just, if we be un just, marr'd, though in marring some, there is necessitic of making others, for if one sall by the Law, tenne to one but another is exalted by the execution of the Law, since the corruption of one must conclude the generation of another, though not alwayes in the same profession; the corruption of an Apothecary, may be the generation of a Doctor of Physicke; the corruption of a Citizen may beget a Courtier, & a Courtier may very well beget an Alderman, the corruption of an Alderman may be the generation of a Country sustice, whose corruption orance easily may beget a tumult, a rumult may beget a Captaine, and the corruption of a Captaine may beget a Gentleman-Viher, and a Gentleman-Viher may beget a Lord, whose wit may beget a Poet, and a Poet may get a thousand pound a yeare, but nothing without corruption.

Tre. Good Mr. Advocate be pleased to leave all digressi-

ons, and speake of the Chanceller.

Adv. Your Lordship doth very seasonably premonish, and Ishall not neede to leave my subject corruption, while I discourse of him, who is the very fenne and stigian abisse of it, five thousand and odde hundred foule and impious corruptions, for I will be briefe; have beene found by severall examinations, and by oathes prov'd against this odious and polluted Chancelor, a man of so tainted, and contagious a life, that it is a miracle any man enjoyeth his nostrills, that hath lived within the sent of his offices; he was borne with teeth in his head, by an affidavit of his Midwife, to note his devouring, and hath one toe on his left foote crooked, and in the forme of an Eagles talon, to foretell his rapacitie: What shall I say? branded, mark'd, and design'd in his birth for shame and oblow quie, which appeareth further by a mole under his right eare, with only three Witches haires int, strange and ominous predictions of nature.

With this intelligence, for as I remember
Your tongue was guilty of no such character,
When hee sat Iudge upon the Admirall,
A pious incorrupt man, a faithfull and fortunate
Servant to his King, and one of the greatest Honours that ever the Admirall received, was
That he had so noble and just a Iudge, this must Imply a strange volubilitie in your tongue, or Conscience, I speake not to discountenance any
Evidence for the King, but to put you in minde,
Mr. Advocate that you had then a better opinion
Of my Lord Chancellor.

Adv. Your Lordship hath most aptly interpos'd, and wish a word I shall easily satisfie all your judgements; He was then a Tudge, and in Cathedra, in which he could not erre; it maybe your Lordships cases, out of the chaire and seate of Iustice, he hath his frailties, is loos'ed and expos'd to the conditions of other humane natures; so every Judge, your Lordships are not ignorant, hath a kinde of priviledge while he is in his state, office and being, and although hee may quoad se, internally and privately be guilty of bribery of luffice, yet quoad nos, and in publike he is an upright and innocent Judge, we are to take no notice, nay, we deserved to suffer, if wee should detect or staine him; for in that we disparage the Office, which is the Kings, and may be our owne, but once remov'd from his place by just dishonour of the King, he is no more a Judge hut a common person, whom the law takes hold on, and wee are then to forget what hee hath beene, and without partialitie to strip and lay him open to the world, a counterfeit and corrupt Iudge, as for example, hee may and ought to flourish inhis greatnesse, and breake any mans necke, with as much facilitic as a jeast, but the case being altered, and hee downe, every subject shall be heard, a Wolfe may be appareld in a Lamb skinne; and if every man should be afraid to speake truth, nay and more than truth, if the good of the subject which are clients sometime require it, there would be no remove of Official cers, if no remove no motions, if no motion in Court no heate, and by consequence but cold Termes; take away this moving. this removing of ludges, the Law may bury it selfe in Buckram, and the kingdome suffer for want of a due execution and now I hope your Lordships are satisfied.

H 2

Tre. Most learnedly concluded to acquit your selfe.

I Ind. Mr. Advocate, please you to urge for satisfaction.

Of the world, and clearing the Kings honour, how

Injustly he proceeded against the Admirall.

Adv. I shall obey your Lordship —— So vast. so infinite hath beene the impudence of this Chancellor, not onely toward the subject, but even the sacred person of the King, that I tremble as with a Palsie to remember it. This man, or rather this monster, having power and commission trusted for the examination of the Lord Admirall, a man persect in all homour and justice; indeede the very ornament and second

Howers

Howers, and indeede the best flower in our garden. Having used all wayes to circumvent his innocence by suborning and promising rewards to his betrayers, by compelling others by the cruelty of tortures, as namely Mounsieur Allegre a most honest and faithfull servant to his Lord, tearing and extending his sinewes upon the racke to force a confession to his purpose, and finding nothing prevaile upon the invincible vertue of the Admirall.

Sec. How he would flatter him?

Adv. Yet most maliciously proceeded to arraigne him; to be short against all colour of Justice condemn'd him of high treasons; oh thinke what the life of man is, that can never be recompenced; but the life of a just man, a man that is the vigour and glory of our life and nation to be torne to death, and facrifis'd beyond the mallice of common persecution. What Tiger of Hercanian breede could have beene so cruell? but this is not all? he was not guilty onely of murder, guilty I may say ... In foro coscientia, though our good Admirall was miraculously preserv'd, but unto this he added a most prodigious & searefull rape, a rape even upon Iustice it felf, the very soule of ourstate, for the restof the Iudges upon the Bench, venerable images of Austria, he most tyranously compel'd to set their hands to his most unjust sentence; did ever story remember the like outrage and injustice; what forfeit, what penalty can be enough to fatisfie this transcendent offence? and yet my good Lords, this is but veniall to the facriledge which now followes, and by him committed, not content with this sentence, not satisfied with horrid violence upon the facred Tribunall, but hee proceedes and blasphemes the very name and honour of the King himselfe, observe that, making him the author and impulsive cause of all these rapines, justifying that he mov'd onely by his speciall command to the death, nay the murder of his most faithfull subject, translating all his owne blacke and damnable guilt upon the Kings heires, a traytor to his Country, first, he conspires the death of one whom the King loves, and whomevery subject ought to honour, and then makes it no conscience to proclaime it the Kings act, & by consequence declares hima

a murderer r

murderer of his owne, and of his best subjects.

Within An Advocate, an Advocate, teare him in pecces, Teare the Chancellor in peeces. (justice.)

Tre. The people have deepe sence of the Chancellors in-

Sec. We must be carefull to prevent their mutiny.

I Ind. It will become our wisedomes to secure the court And prisoner.

Tre. Captaine of the guard.

2. What can you say for your selfe Lord Chancellor.

Cha. Againe, I confesse all, and humbly sly to

The royall mercy of the King.

Tre. And this submission is the way to purchase it. Cha. Heare me great ludges, if you have not lost For my sake all your charities, I beseech you, Let the King know my heart is full of penitence, Calme his high-going sea, or in that tempest I ruine to eternitic, oh my Lords, Consider your owne places, and the helmes You sit at, while with all your providence You steere, looke forth and see devouring quicksands, My ambition now is punish'd, and my pride Of state and greatnesse falling into nothing, I that had never time through vast employments To thinke of heaven, feele his revengefull wrath, Boyling my blood, and scorching up my entrills, There doomesday is my conscience blacke and horrid, For my abuse of Justice, but no stings Prickt with that terrour as the wounds I made Vpon the pious Admirall, some good man Beare my repentance thither, he is mercifull, And may encline the King to stay his lightning Which threatens my confusion, that my free Resigne of title, office, and what else My pride look'd at, would buy my poore lives safety, For ever banish me the court, and let Me waste my life farre off in some Village.

Adv. How? Did your Lordships note his request to you, he would direct your sentence to punish him with confining him to live in the country, like the Mouse in the Fable, that having offended to deserve death, beg'd he might be banished into a Parmisan. I hope your Lordships will be more just to the nature of his offences.

him

Sec. I could have wish'd him fall on softer ground

For his good parts.

Tre. My Lord, this is your sentence for you high missemeanours against his Majesties Iudges, for your unjust sentence of the most equal Lord Admirall, for many and soule corruptions and abuse of your office, and that infinite staine of the Kings person, and honour, we in his Majesties name, deprive you of your estate of Chancellor. & declare you uncapeable of any judicial office, & besides condemne you in the sum of two hundred thousand crownes; whereof one hundred thousand to the King, and one hundred thousand to the Lord Admirall, and what remaineth of your estate to goe to the restitution of those you have injured, and to suffer perpetual imprisonment in the Castle, so take him to your custody. Your Lordships have been emercifull in his sentence.

They have spar'd my life then, that some cure may bring,

I spend it in my prayers for the King.

Exeuns:

Enter Admirall in his Gowne and Cap, his Wife.

Adm. Allegre I am glad he hath so much strength,

I prethee let me see him.

Wif. It will but

Enlarge a passion ____ my Lord hee'le come Another time and tender you his service.

Adm. Nay then -

Wif. Although I like it not, I must obey.

t obey. Exit

Enter Allegre supported.

Adm. Welcome my injur'd servant, what a misery

Ha they made on thee?

Al. Though some change appeare Vpon my body, whose severe affliction Hath brought it thus to be sustained by others, My hurt is still the same in faith to you, Not broken with their rage.

Adm. Alas poore man !

Were all my joyes essentiall, and so mighty
As the assected world believes I taste,
This object were enough to unsweeten all,
Though in thy absence I had suffering,
And selt within me a strong sympathy,
While for my sake their cruelty did vexe,
And fright thy nerves with horrour of thy sence,
Yet in this spectacle I apprehend
More griefe than all my imagination
Could let before into me; didst not curse me

Vpon the torture?

Al. Good my Lord, let not The thought of what I suffer'd dwell upon Your memory, they could not punish more Then what my duty did oblige to beare For you and Iustice, but theres some thing in Your lookes, presents more feare than all the mallice Of my tormentors could affect my soule with, That palenesse, and the other formes you weare, Would well become a guilty Admirall, and one Lost to his hopes and honour, not the man Vpon whose life the fury of unjustice Arm'd with fierce lightning, and the power of thunder, Can make no breach, I was not rack'd till now, Theres more death in that falling eye, than all Rage ever yet brought forth, what accident sir can blast, Can be so blacke and fatall to distract The calme? the triumph that should fit upon Your noble brow, misfortune could have no Time to conspire with fate, since you were rescued By the great arme of providence, nor can Those garlands that now grow about your forehead With all the poyson of the world be blasted.

Adm. Allegre, thou dost beare thy wounds upon thee, In wide and spacious characters, but in The volumne of my sadnesse thou dost want. An eye to reade an open force, hath torne Thy manly sinewes which sometime may cure

The engine is not seene that wounds thy Master, Past all the remedy of art or time, The flatteries of Court, of fame or honours, Thus in the Sommer a tall flourishing tree, Transplanted by strong hand, with all her leaves And blooming pride upon her makes a shew Of Spring, tempting the eye with wanton blossome, But not the Sunne with all her amorous smiles, The dewes of mornings, or the teares of night, Can roote her fibers in the earth agen, Or make her bosome kinde, to growth and bearing, But the tree withers, and those very beames That once were naturall warmth to her soft verdure Dry up her sap and shoote a seaver through to the the The barke and rinde, till she becomes a burthen To that which gave her life: so Chabot, Chabot, Al. Wonder in apprehension, I must Suspect your health indeede. Adm. No no, thou shanot Be troubled, I but stirr'd thee with a morrall, Thats empty containes nothing, I am well, See I can walke poore man, thou hast not strength yet. Al. What accident is ground of this diffraction? Enter Admirall. Adm. Thou hast not heard yet whats become oth' Chancel-Adm, Poore gentleman, when I thinke Vpon the King, I've balme enough to cure A thousand wounds, have I not Allegre? Was ever bountious mercy read in story, Like his upon my life, condemn'd for sacrifice By Law, and snatch'd out of the flame unlooked for, And unpetitioned that his justice then

That wod not spare whom his owne love made great.

But give me up to the most cruell test

Of Judges, for some boldnesse in defence Of my owne merits, and my honest faith to him Was rare, past example. Enter

Enter Father.

Fa. Sir, the King Is comming hither.

Al. It will Become my duty fir to leave you now.

Adm, Stay by all meanes Allegre, 'tsha ll concerne you,

I'me infinitely honor'd in his presence.

Enter King, Queene, Constable, and Wife. King. Madam be comforted, Ile be his Phisitian.

wif. Pray heaven you may.

King. No ceremoniall knees. Give me thy heart, my deare, my honest Chabot, And yet in vaine I chalenge that tis here Already in my owne, and shall be cherish'd With care of my best life, violence Shall ravish it from my possession. Not those distempers, that infirme my blood And spirits shall be tray it to a feare, When time and nature joyne to dispossesse My body of a cold and languishing breath, No firoake in all my arteries, but filence In every faculty, yet diffect me then, And in my heart, the world shall read thee living And by the vertue of thy name write there, That part of me shall never putrifie, When I am lost in all my other dust.

Adm. You too much honour your poore servant sir, My heart dispares so rich a monument:

But when it dies____

King. I wonot heare a found
Of any thing that trenched upon death,
He speakes the funerall of my crowne that prophesies.
So unkinde a fate, weele live and die together,
And by that duty which hath taught you hitherto,
All loyall and just services I charge thee,
Preserve thy heart for me and thy reward,
Which now shall crowne thy merits.

Adm. I have found

A glorious harvest in your favour sir, And by this overflow of royall grace, All my deserts are shadowes and flie from mee, I have not in the wealth of my desires, Enough to pay you now, yet you encourage me To make one suite.

King. So soone as nam'd possesse it.

Adm. You would be pleas'd take notice of this Gentleman,

A Secretary of mine.

Con. Mounsieur Allegre,

He that was rack'd fir for your Admirall.

Adm. His limbs want strength to tender their full duty,

An honest man that suffers for my sake.

King. He shall be deare to us, for what has past sir By the unjustice of our Chancellors power, Weele sludy to recompence, ith' meane time that office You exercis'd for Chabot we translate To our selfe, you shall be our Secretary.

Al. This is

An honour above my weake desert, and shall Oblige the service of my life to satisfie it.

Adm. You are gracious, and in this act have put

All our complaints to silence, you Allegre,

Enter Tresuror, Secretary. Cherish your health, and feeble limbs which cannot Without much prejudice be thus employ'd; All my best wishes with thee.

Al. All my prayers

Are duties to your Lordship_

King. Tistoolittle,

Can forfeit of his place, wealth, and a lasting Imprisonment purge his offences to Our honest Admirall, had our person beene Exempted from his mallice, he did persecute The life of Chabot with an equall wrath, You should have powr'd death on his treacherous head, I revoke all your sentences, and make Him that was wrong'd full Master of his destiny

Exit

Be thou his judge.

Adm. O farre be such injustice, Be thou his judge. I know his doome is heavie, and I begge Where mercy may be let into his sentence For my sake you would soften it, I have Glory enough to be set right in yours, And my deare countries thought, and by an act With such apparent notice to the world. King. Expresse it in some joy then. Cos, Manufigur Alvers. Adm. I will strive To shew that pious gratitude to you but Adm. My frame hath lately sir beene tane a peeces, Kng. But what-And but now put together, the least force Of mirth will shake and unjoynt all my reason, with the will Your patience royall sir. King. Île have no patience, If thou forget the courage of a man. Adm. My strength would flatter me. Now I begin to feare his apprehension, Why how is Chabets spirit falne? Qu. Twerebelt

He were convei'd to his bed. Wif. How soone rurn'd widdow. Adm. Who would not wish to live to serve your goodness. Stand from me, you betray me with your seares, The plummets may fall off that hang upon My heart, they were but thoughts at first, or if They weigh me downe to death, let not my eyos Close with another object then the King, Let him be last I looke on. King. I would not have him lost for my whole Kingdome: Con. He may recover sir. King. I see it fall, in the second of the se For Iultice being the proppe of every Kingdome. And mine broke, violating him that was the way The knot and contract of it all in him, It already falling in my eare, Pompey.

Pompey could heare it thunder, when the Senate And Capitoll were deafe, so heavens loud chiding, He have another sentence for my Chancellor, In a Prince What a swift executioner is a frowne, Especially of great and noble soules; How is it with my Philip? Adm. I must begge and it is a line and a second One other boone. I do all their annual consumer quitally King. Vpon condition My Chabot will collect his scatter'd spirits And be himselfe agen, he shall divide My Kingdome with me, and which will the control will Fa. Sweete King. W 7110 C. Mc. 1100 D Happe Line 12 12 Adm. I observe Tory make init refrancional all orders A fierce and killing wrath engendred in you; For my take, as you wish me strength to serve you? Forgive your Chancellor, let not the story Of Philip Chabot read hereafter drawling and stom this links A teare from any family, I befeech noilleand switch to some of Your royall mercy on his life, and free conflictions block Remission of all seasure upon his state in Boides were sond of I have no comfort else. King. Endeavour But thy owne health, and pronounce generall pardon To all through France. Adm. Sir I must kneele to thanke you, It is not seal'd else, your blest hand live happy, May all you trust have no lesse faith then Chabet, Wif. His heart is broken. Fa. And kneeling sir, As his ambition were in death to shew The truth of his obedience. Con. I feard this issue, Tre. Hees past hope. King. He has a victory ins death, this world

Deserv'd him not, how soone he was translated To glorious eternitie, tis too late To fright the ayre with words, my teares embalme him.

gyllan war yar giland wif. What can become of me? Qu. Hebe your husband Madam, and with care and I Supply your childrens father, to your father He be a sonne, in what our love or power Can serve his friends, Chabot shall nere be wanting, The greatest losse is mine, past scale or recompence, We will proceede no further gainst the Chancellor, To the charitie of our Admirall he owes

His life which ever banish'd to a prison, Shall not beget in us, or in the subject New feares of his injustice, for his fortunes

Great and acquir'd corruptly, tis our will mill and acquir'd corruptly, They make just restitution for all wrongs

3-1000 -5 That shall within a yeare be prov'd against him O Chabot that shall boast as many monuments

As there be hearts in France, which as they grow, Shall with more love enshrine thee, Kings they say,

Die not, or starve succession, oh why I will so we have

Should that stand firme, and Kings themselves despaire,

To finde their lubject still in the next heire.

Excent.

m. Endeavour Buston cwine health, and ananounce seneral perdem. STREET HOUSE

. Sie I malt fractiers trake you.

A Soft Tolling of the State of FJNJS.

merculo delita decimento

CONTRACTOR TO

